NEW ENGLAND ENTRIES SHARE TRIAL HONORS AT STOCKHOLM GAMES

Howard P. Drew, the Springfield High School boy, landed his heat and his semi-final heat in the 100 metre event at Stockholm, as it was expected by his friends in New England. Drew, although a schoolboy, is married and has a small family, and it was only after a subscription had been collected that Drew was enabled to take the trip. While at school he worked as a bellboy to support his wife and children.

Drew is about twenty-one years of age, colored, and has been interested in the running game since he was about sixteen years old. To start his career he was forced to run away from home on Saturday afternoons, as his mother needed his help. Drew made wonderful showings at various meets and soon won his mother on his side. He never had a trainer or adviser, but he had the style and speed and that is what won for him.

As a schoolboy in the interscholastic meets he was invincible. He entered in the Williams, Harvard and Yale interscholastics each year and won practically every year in the 100-yard event and the 220-yard run.

High school meets were not his limit, as he proved a consistent winner against the pick of the country in open amateur meets.

STOCKHOLM, July 6.—American sprinters and runners carried off the honors of the opening day of the Olympic games in the presence of the royal family of Sweden and 40,000 other spectators. Three New England athletes were among the victors.

The trial heats and semi-finals of the 100-metre dash resulted in the survival of five Americans and one South African to compete in the finals tomorrow. The Americans left were: Howard P. Drew, Alvah T. Meyer, Ralph E. Craig, Donald F. Lippincott and F. V. Belote.

Two of these men, Meyer and Lippincott, had not been picked by the American committee as the nation's representatives, but were placed on the "supplemental" list.

HALPIN OF BOSTON FAILS TO QUALIFY.

The only American of those starting who failed to qualify in the 800-metre run was Thomas J. Halpin of the Boston Athletic Association. The following Americans survived the test in the 800-metre contest:

David L. Caldwell, Herbert N. Putnam, John Paul Jones, Clarence S. Edmundson, Ira N. Davenport, Harland W. Holden, Melvin W. Sheppard and James E. Meredith.

FIREMEN BUSY ALL OVER CITY

A three-alarm fire burned out Boston & Maine hay shed No. 25 and the plant of E. A. Gillette & Sons, wagon and carriage supplies, on Rutherford avenue, Charlestown, this afternoon.

The total loss was estimated at $80,000, of which $30,000 was to the hay shed and $50,000 to the Gillette building.

The flames spread swiftly in Charlestown. Sparks ignited the three-story wooden building adjoining, occupied by E. A. Gillette & Sons. The fire in the Gillette plant threatened to be serious.

Sparks ignited the roof of P. & R. J. Lombard's teaming place across the street.

The fire in the hayshed swept through the 200-foot length of the low structure. Firemen and freight yard employes rolled bales of hay out into the yard. Some of the bales were blazing.

The firemen were able to get at the fire from three directions—front, rear and on one side. In a few minutes tons of water were being poured on the flames in an effort to drown the fire before it communicated to the acres of other inflammable property in that section.

Heat Overcomes Fireman.

There was a two-alarm fire in the same place, freight shed No. 25, a week ago, and a single-alarm fire in Shed No. 24 yesterday.

The disastrous fire in the H. P. Hood Company's stables on Rutherford avenue last night, in which many horses were lost, is in the immediate neighborhood.

This string of fires in the same small territory and the fact that today's fire started, or was started, in two places at the same time, made the firemen and police suspect incendiarism.

John McDermott, horseman of Engine No. 36, was overcome by heat while holding a hoseline on the hay shed. He was removed to the shade of a building, where ice was applied to his head, and then he was taken away for further treatment.

While the hose wagon of Engine No. 32 was drawn up in an alley adjoining the burning shed, sparks ignited the bundles of firemen's clothing.

Andrew Brown, watchman at the Lombard building, put out a roof fire with the Lombard hose.

Fire Spread Rapidly.

The fire ran through the three-story wooden Gillette building rapidly. There was no one at work in the place.

The office force of the Boston Ice Company packed up important papers and left.

The Gillette building fire threw out a yellow smoke, caused by wagon paints and varnishes.

Three deck guns were stationed in the driveway, running the length of the building, and did effective work with their 2-inch nozzles.

NEW HAVEN CLAIMS IT PAID TAX TWICE

The New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad brought suit in the Supreme Court today against the Commonwealth of Massachusetts to recover $78,707.29 of the franchise tax paid to the State in 1910. The road claims its real estate in Park square should not have been taxed by the State. The road paid $147,653 to the State in that year. This was paid in part on the real estate for 1910, and the company claims it could have been deducted in determining the franchise tax. The property is assessed at $4,472,000.

S. S. PHILADELPHIA HELD UP BY STRIKE

NEW YORK, July 6.—One hundred and seventy-five engine room employes of the liner Philadelphia today held up that ship five minutes before she was due to leave New York, with 200 passengers. The officials of the American Line were astonished at the action of the men. They contended that they had the best paid lot of workers in service.

John Linehan of No. 186 Belmont street, Malden, was found dead in his bed today by his brother, the second victim of the heat of yesterday. Linehan occupied the house alone. Yesterday he did not appear at work, and his brother investigated today and found the body. Medical Examiner Durrell found death due to heart failure resulting from the heat.

Arthur Broderick, fifty-eight, of No. 51 Shirley street, a laborer, was overcome while at work at No. 378 Congress street, and died at the Grace Hospital. Eight others have been reported as overcome.

Relief from the heat was promised today. The morning temperatures fell below yesterday's marks, and the weather bureau said that up in the St. Lawrence valley a cool wind was working down toward Boston.

OLYMPIC FLOATED AFTER GROUNDING TO ESCAPE COLLISION

NEW YORK, July 6.—After being ashore for about an hour today, the White Star liner Olympic, a sister ship of the Titanic, was floated this afternoon. The Olympic ran on a mud flat between Ellis Island and Communipaw, N. J., to avoid collision with a yacht. The liner had just left her dock with more than 900 passengers in the first cabin, including the Italian Ambassador, the Marquis Cusani Consobonel, and John Barrett. As the liner neared Ellis Island a yacht got in her path. The steamship made a quick turn and cleared the little craft, but went on the mud banks.

ROYALTY AT THE HENLEY REGATTA

HENLEY ON THAMES, England, July 6.—This was royalty's day in the Henley regatta. King George and Queen Mary arrived from London on the state barge shortly after noon. More than 1,000,000 persons along the banks of the Thames saw the stately procession come up the river. The voyage of the royal barge was one continuous demonstration.

The weather today was ideal. Eton College beat Jesus College, Cambridge, in the finals for the Ladies' Challenge Plate, Queen Mary awarded the trophy.

The Stewards' Challenge Cup was won by New College, Oxford, who defeated the Thames Rowing Club.

The Wyfold challenge cup was won by College, Cambridge, who defeated the London Rowing Club's crew.

The Paris Rowing Club won the Thames cup, defeating St. Johns, Oxford.

The grand challenge cup was won by the Sydney, N. S. W., crew, who defeated the Leander Rowing Club.

Powell won the Diamond sculls defeating McCulloch.

The first crew of Christ Church, Oxford, won the Visitors' cup, beating the second crew of the same institution.

Logan and Gaidi won the silver goblets in the doubles from Bercsford and Clonette.

STEEL COMPANY ASKS REDUCTION OF TAXES

An abatement of the $2,000 franchise tax which was paid by the American Steel and Wire Company last May was asked in the Supreme Court, through a petition filed today. The petition was filed against the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. The company has plants in nearly every State in the Union, and claims the tax illegal, as most of its property is outside of this State. The property of the company is valued at $137,000,000 and capitalized at $90,000,000. The company's property in Massachusetts is valued at $4,887,60.

STEINERT CHAUFFEUR IS KILLED

Luigi Tempesto, chauffeur for Alexander Steinert of No. 401 Commonwealth avenue, was killed and six other persons were injured when Steinert's automobile collided with a heavy charcoal team on Massachusetts avenue near Clapp street, Dorchester, early today.

Steinert is treasurer of M. Steinert & Co., piano manufacturers. In the machine, besides Tempesto, who was driving, were William and Frank J. Steinert, sons of the owner; Miss Florence Derrin, of No. 22 Cushing avenue, Dorchester, and George S. Johnson of No. 81 Newbury street. All were injured.

Struck Eight-eight.

The automobile struck a wagon driven by John Murphy of No. 20 Water street, Somerville. Dominico Falcone of the same address was with Murphy. Both were thrown to the street and badly bruised.

William Steinert received a lacerated wound on his elbow. Miss Derrin, Johnson and Frank Steinert were suffering from shock. Falcone was taken to the City Hospital, suffering with scalp wounds.

Tempesto received a fracture of the skull. He was taken to the City Hospital and died within half an hour.

According to witnesses, the automobile was coming along Massachusetts avenue at a good pace. It is presumed the brakes refused to work and the car crashed into the wagon from behind. The rear wheel of the wagon was torn off and the right side of the automobile was smashed. The charcoal in the wagon was scattered across the street and street car traffic was held up for some time.

Searchlight Blinded Chauffeur.

The accident was caused by the searchlight of an electric car blinding the eyes of the chauffeur and preventing him from seeing a heavily laden charcoal wagon ahead. The auto was proceeding out Massachusetts avenue to the south, and just near Clapp street an electric car bound in town. The auto, directly in the car tracks, was turned quickly to the left and immediately telescoped the charcoal wagon. The chauffeur caught sight of the wagon ahead only for a moment after emerging from the rays of the powerful electric car searchlight.

He made a frantic effort to turn out, but the rear wheels of his machine skidded and the auto side slashed the wagon. The entire right side of the auto was ripped out and splintered into kindling. The horses attached to the charcoal wagon mostly plunged into Clapp street and collided with a repair wagon of the Elevated.

John O'Connor, driver of the repair wagon, saw the runaway charcoal team turn the corner, but could not avert a collision. He drew quickly to the sidewalk, but not in time to avoid a crash. The swinging charcoal wagon caught the repair team on the side and both were upset. O'Connor and his helpers were thrown into the street and badly bruised.

The police declare that with the exception of the members of the Steinert family, the names and addresses of the persons hurt, including the women, were today found to be fictitious.

'Steam Roller in the Church' Boynton Asks 'Square Deal' Congregation Is with Pastor

MRS. C. A. BOYNTON.

Man Who Accused Minister Suspended by Wollaston Church After Stormy Meeting.

Chester A. Boynton of Revere, whose accusations against the Rev. William B. Ayers of the Park and Downa Congregational Church of Wollaston have split the church into two factions, has been suspended for six months by a vote of 73 to 20 at a meeting of the church. Boynton declared today he will appeal the case to the higher church authorities.

The meeting of the church was of a sensational nature. Boynton was accused of having broken a promise he had made, either to cease his accusations against Mr. Ayers, or to withdraw from the church. He attempted to speak in his own defence, but was hissed down repeatedly.

3 INDICTED IN DYNAMITE CASE

The Grand Jury empanelled last Monday for the next six months today reported to Judge Pratt in the Suffolk Superior Court indictments against William H. Schaunberg, John R. Hutchinson and John Massey, charged with conspiracy to put dynamite on the tracks of the Boston Elevated railroad. Hutchinson is also charged with having a quantity of dynamite in his home, and with actually placing the explosive on the tracks. The maximum sentence for this is ten years. The alleged acts occurred in the Brighton district. George F. Mooney was indicted on several counts of larceny. It is alleged that over a year ago he telephoned to Jeshah A. Brown, proprietor of the Blenheim Hotel, and said:

"I am a police officer. I'm going to send a messenger boy to see you every week. You give him some 'protection money' for me."

Brown, it is stated, gave in all about $2,000 in weekly payments. He had never seen Mooney, and put detectives on the track without success. Inspectors Wolf, Laughlin and McCauley finally took the case, on a report, and arrested Mooney.

Luigi Nitzaro was indicted for murder in the second degree and for carrying a dangerous weapon. He is charged with having shot and killed Joseph Vennie, on May 31.

Robert Snowden, alias Robert Johnson, was indicted, charged with manslaughter. It is alleged he hit John F. Craigie on the head with a beer bottle, killing him, on June 27.

In all thirty-three indictments and fifteen no bills were reported.

Trolley Collision at Subway Entrance Passengers Escape

Twelve passengers were shaken up in a rear-end trolley collision at the Pleasant street entrance to the Tremont street subway today.

The collision was caused, according to the Elevated, because the motorman of one car did not see the conductor who had started back from the car ahead to give warning.

How the motorman of the oncoming car could fail to see a conductor who had started back from a car ahead for the express purpose of giving a warning is not explained.

Here is the Elevated's official account: At 8:45 at Pleasant street a Lenox street-North Station car collided with a Roxbury Crossing-North Station car at the subway entrance.

The Roxbury Crossing car was stopped by a wire crew which was working there. The conductor went back to flag the Lenox street car. The motorman of the oncoming Lenox street car did not see the conductor. The Lenox street car bumped the Roxbury Crossing car. Neither car was damaged. There was four minutes' delay. One man said that he was hurt, but he refused to give his name or the nature of his injury. There were eight passengers on the Lenox street car and four on the Roxbury Crossing car.

WILSON PUTS TARIFF FIRST

SEAGHT, N. J., July 6.—Agreeing with the idea of the leaders of other parties in that the tariff is to be the paramount issue of the coming campaign, Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey today stated that the matter was so interlaced with questions of the trusts and other big issues as to be too complicated to be discussed informally.

POLICE GUARD CHURCH AS BOYNTON IS SUSPENDED

His wife, who is named in his $20,000 alienation suit against Pastor Ayers, joined in the hissing and later voted for the suspension of her husband.

The seventy-three votes against Boynton were mostly cast by women. An even dozen of members, mostly men, opposed his suspension from membership.

The meeting of the church, held behind closely guarded doors, with windows latched, curtains drawn and a policeman on the outside, was sensational in the extreme.

Today, Boynton charged there was a "frame roller" in the church. He said he was not given a "square deal." He declared the "gag rule" was applied, that the church was rife with politics and that the meeting was the most unfair he had ever attended and was a disgrace to the church.

Boynton's friends agreed with him.

People at the church meeting which resulted in Boynton's suspension and the hoots at times was little short of uproarious. But some of them denied there was anything out of the way in the hissing with which members greeted Boynton every time he tried to talk. They said the presence of a policeman was not to be considered worthy of remark.

Supporters of Mr. Ayers claimed a sweeping victory. One of them today spoke of the writing as an "Armageddon," though the name of the preacher was mentioned but once by Boynton—the only time during the session—they claimed the hisses which greeted Boynton as he pronounced the name proved the majority of the church sided with Mr. Ayers.

The meeting was brim full of excitement from start to bitter finish. Behind tightly shut doors, the standing committee of the church, in "star chamber" session voted four to nine in favor of recommending to the church the suspension of Boynton. Boynton appeared before the committee, while Mr. Ayers was preaching a sermon in the next room.

Meeting After Sermon.

After the sermon the church meeting. Boynton had been summoned to appear on a charge that he broke his word to the standing committee. This committee accused him of violating a pledge that he would either withdraw the suit against the pastor, or else withdraw from membership in the church. Boynton denied that he ever made the promise.

Boynton claimed that he was given no opportunity to defend himself, owing to the hospitality of many of the members. He said he saw an application of the "gag rule." Then when he sat down—convinced he would not get a fair deal, Boynton declared—the vote was taken, his wife and his parents-in-law casting three ballots against him.

No mention was made at the meeting or in the church of the other grave charges in the case, but there was an undercurrent of sentiment that the meeting was the prelude to more sensational developments yet to come.

The trouble in the church began last Fall, when charges were made against the minister. Boynton and others appointed to the Suffolk Congregational Council of ministers for a hearing of the charges. This hearing was conducted with the utmost secrecy in Pilgrim Church, Dorchester.

Enemies of the minister made investigations of the pastor's career at Cape Vincent, N. Y., before he came to Wollaston. The church council held all the charges, then found the more serious accusations had been established, and made a report which placed Mr. Ayers "under no blame or reproach."

Then came Boynton's suit for $25,000 against Mr. Ayers, charging the latter with alienating the affections of his wife, Mrs. Helen W. Boynton.

The church meeting was well attended. Members, many women, and many girls, apparently still in their teens, filed into the side entrance while the standing committee was still in session in an anteroom in the front part of the church. The meeting was held in the Sunday school room, reached by stairs from the side door to the small door, right at the floor below the wreath and grass of the church-yard.

Mr. Ayers reached the church an hour after the standing committee had settled down to business in the Sunday school room. The pastor walked with quick gait, square shoulders and head erect. His clerical waistcoat protected several inches below his coat collar, lending the upper part of a black linen collar with the ends turned in front.

The pastor has a well-knit frame, striking head, and large eyes. His hair seemed iron-gray on the sides below his rather sober straw hat. A shock of hair stood over either ear, adding to the unusual in his appearance. His face is lined.

The minister was stopped by the newspaper men.

"Can we come into your prayer meeting?" they asked.

"Why surely," Mr. Ayers assented.

The preacher's bearing was extremely cordial. His resonant baritone voice intoned the fervor of his tone. The reporters thought they had misplaced the church, which had worn a big "Welcome Strangers" sign over the main double doors on Beacon road when the meeting first appeared, and which was bereft of the sign when the newspaper men called after. Then to it as an argument for their admission into the basement.

That wasn't the only forbidding point. A woman picket, or something to the same effect, marched around the church. She warned the newspaper men off, and closed the windows so they could not see. But Pastor Ayers spoke so loudly that most of the sting of the cold shoulder reception was taken off.

In the Sunday school room, under the main structure of rough-brown stone, the conversation, with women in the majority, sat on five rows of chairs, twelve seats in each row. Others stood along the sides. The pastor walked to the platform. Over in the ante-room in the corner of the basement could be heard the faint rumble of the standing committee's secret hearing Boynton's case.

The service opened with a hymn, which was sung by all present, seated. Then came a prayer by Mr. Ayers, standing. From the street the newspaper men and a small crowd of curious folk could see him on the platform. They were present that ever in the electric light that flooded the basement. Then came another hymn and then the sermon.

The pastor read two verses from Isaiah.

And though the Lord give you the bread of adversity, and the water of affliction, yet shall not thy teachers be removed into a corner any more, but thine eyes shall see thy teachers:

And thine ears shall hear a word behind thee, saying, This is the way, walk ye in it, when ye turn to the right hand, and when ye turn to the left.

Ayers' Sermon.

Part of the minister's sermon drifted out through the open hall windows to the little group hustling on the out of the church lawn. Here and there some of his thoughts:

"It is only the higher and better things a man does that he is proud of and which ought to be talked about. We are to be the stars of the world. We look upon the best of man's morals.

"There are others who in the world who constantly override the rights of others. They are constantly brushing up against other persons and injuring them. They ruthlessly squander the lives and the blood and the soul of their fellow man. We might mention names. We might write them down on paper. But I asked if you wanted to hear those names, you would say no!

While the newspaper listeners were whispering that the pastor's words were directed at persons who could easily be named, Pastor Ayers' words were saying: "Here in the pulpit."

The crowd clung to the position of vantage at the half-windows, and the pulpit were called. That is, two people, a man and a woman, on two separate days, at distinct occasions, went somewhere and gave their testimony against Boynton, who had broken his word.

Policeman Appears.

The reporters had been ordered from the interior of the church. They never got further than the stairway, where two men were stationed at the passage. They were told they must not out or be put out. One man said something that didn't sound church-like. He was told to "move on" under the penalty of arrest. Finally, one policeman and then a second, evidently on detail duty, put in an appearance. The one that came was hailed as "Mike" Donovan.

"Get on the gravel," said Donovan, urging the reporters and curious ones off.

"But it isn't grass, it's weeds," somebody said.

"Make them get off," put in a strong male voice, from a heavy set man, later declared to be H. A. Podbury.

"Can you take your orders from him?" somebody asked Donovan, pointing to the heavy set man.

"I take no personal interest in this church," said the heavy set man. "Get off."

Somebody said Mrs. Podbury was a member of the church, but Mr. Podbury was not.

"You fellows don't know the truth about the pastor, for if you did, you wouldn't be printing such stories," said Mr. and Mrs. Podbury, who had been talking in an angry tone.

The lawn was finally cleared, and from the sidewalk the little group watched the proceedings through the half-windows. The services ended and the pastor appeared in the reporters caught up with him.

"Mr. Ayers, won't you give us a statement?" they asked.

"I'm not saying a word," he replied. "My friends and I have talked about this and have lots of evidence. They will tell me to say nothing. I am going to let my case rest."

"Legal representative, Mr. Ayers?" was asked.

"As I said before, I'm not doing any talking. It is true I've been quoted often in the papers, but I don't intend to talk any more."

"Have the papers in the allegation suit been served on you?"

The minister put his hand up, saying: "I refuse to answer. So far as I know there are no legal proceedings. But I'm not doing any talking. Good-night."

Rock marched the reporters on the double-quick to the church. A small horde of village youngsters, eager for gossip and sensation, were waiting him. The conversation lowered about.

Boynton was still there. So was the heavy set man who said he had a personal interest in "this matter." Through the half windows could be seen two men on the platform where the minister had preached. One of them, a youngish-looking man, was reading aloud. Boynton not a little today with a telegram reading:

"May Seagirt, N. J., go down in history with sea girt Salamis. Fully one-fourth of my message promise Republican support to the ticket."

Salamis is a sea girt island in the Gulf of Aegina, near which the Greeks under Themistocles gained a memorable naval victory over the Persians in 480 B. C., and of which Solon and Euripides were natives.

Vote for Suspension.

Immediately after calling the meeting to order, Colby announced the result of the meeting of the standing committee. Boynton had appeared before this committee. Mr. Ayers, a member of this committee, was not present. The committeemen present were: Colby, as chairman; Lieutenant James D. Wilson, U. S. N., deacon in the church; Mrs. Richardson, Mrs. C. C. Blake, Mrs. A. A. Chase, Mr. Holmes, Treasurer A. M. Barstow of the church and Deacon Kershaw.

The committee took its ballot after Boynton had left the room.

Moderator Colby announced to the church body that the committee, by a vote of four to three had passed a resolution recommending the suspension of Boynton till January 1, 1913. Those were eight committeemen present. One and one voted. Treasurer Barstow later admitted that it was he who had not voted. As to the four who had voted against Boynton, opinions differ. The names of Colby, Wilson, Blake and Chase were mentioned, but other groupings of the vote were given by those who were supposed to have a good kind of what had transpired.

Colby asked for a viva voce vote to have the meeting conducted according to the church laws. This was given. Then he called:

"Chester A. Boynton."

Boynton's Defence.

Boynton stood up. He began by reading the letter he had received from the committee, summoning him to appear and answer the charges against him.

He was accused of violating his word, alleged to have been given to the standing committee, a month ago, to the effect that he would withdraw his name from the church or else cease "all action or talk against the pastor and church."

Boynton read this letter, with emphasis. But as soon as he had started to read from a report of the Congregational Church Committee, he was interrupted by the first outburst of hissing of the night. The hisses that followed were many.

Boynton tried to bring in something from the committee's report. He charged that there had been a secret meeting held in the home of the pastor for the purpose of ousting four members of the church. He claimed that the minister had previously promised to promote harmony in the church.

Deacon Wilson objected, declaring that no personalities should be brought into the meeting. He was sustained by the chair.

In a few minutes there were more and even louder hisses when Boynton started afresh.

Members said Mrs. Helen W. Boynton, wife of the man placed under suspension, had joined in the hissing of her husband.

"Your committee wrote me this letter and here I am denied the right to defend myself," declared Boynton.

More hissing.

Colby ruled that the meeting was called for one specific purpose. "As long as I preside here I shall insist we stick to that one specific purpose," he announced, strongly.

"For whom does this letter I hold come?" queried Boynton.

"From the standing committee," replied the moderator.

"Did the standing committee approve this letter?"

"Yes."

"Then why will you not let me answer these charges in the committee's letter?"

More hissing!

"Mr. Chairman, I appeal to you for fair play," said Boynton. "I want a square deal. I have not seen a letter containing specific charges, and also the assurance that I should have the opportunity to speak in my own defence. Still, Mr. Chairman, when I attempt to make a precedent I am cut off by the gag rule."

More hissing!

Colby Runs Steam Roller.

"I am elected moderator of this meeting," said Mr. Colby, "to bring before this church specific matter, and as long as I am moderator, and so long as this meeting is for one specific purpose, I intend to see that no other foreign matter is brought up."

"Explain the purpose of the letter."

Notes from the friends of the minister's Hisses became louder!

"Mr. Chairman, this is absolutely an unfair deal, and I shall certainly appeal to the proper authorities. I have certain rights as a member of this church, and I don't intend to lose those rights denied me," cried Boynton.

OLDEST HOUSE IN WESTFORD BURNED

WESTFORD, July 6.—A defective chimney today caused a fire in the oldest house in town. Before the fire apparatus arrived the house, which was built 180 years ago, was burned to the ground. Lilla Gilbert Finds Her Ideal

H. P. Renshaw Wins Heiress

HEIRESS AND FIANCE

Newport Belle, Worth $15,000,000, Gets Man Up to Her Specifications.

NEWPORT, R. I., July 6.—"Well," say the society matrons and maids—also the men—"then Howard Price Renshaw is Lilla Gilbert's famous 'ideal man.'"

"We're glad the $15,000,000 heiress has at last found a man who fills the long bill of particulars that she made out."

The announcement of the engagement of Miss Lilla B. Gilbert, daughter of Mrs. H. Brainerd Gilbert of New York city and of Great Neck, L. I., to Howard Price Renshaw, son of Richard Renshaw of Troy, N. Y., and of Norston, Ct., is of exceptional interest on account of the many specific qualifications that the young society beauty demanded before she would surrender her heart.

Here is the "Perfect Man," the "Ideal Ideal," that Miss Gilbert outlined to her girl friends once, when asked what sort of a man she would marry:

HE MUST BE:

Six feet tall, and fond of athletics; a brunette, a good rider and fond of animals; clean-shaven, with a firm jaw, and care close to his hands; an Episcopalian and a Republican; AND A MONEY-MAKER.

HE MUST HAVE:

Thick hair curled over his left ear, with no red to it; a straight nose; large and intelligent eyes, but not soulful ones, because no one wishes a soulful eyes is a moneymaker; decided ideas on the raising of pigs and poultry.

HE MUST:

Like lemon with his tea and eat ice cream with a fork; like Robert Chambers' stories and Clement; dance the Turkey Trot and wear his clothes like John Drew does; swear like a gentleman and be gentlemanly even in his cups.

HE MUST NOT:

Wear pink neckties and jewelry; ever have been REALLY in love.

Miss Gilbert added, as the story goes:

"He must be able to prove his love publicly. I'll give him—let me see—Oh! I'll give him twenty-five hours and three minutes to prove he loves me as he should."

The whimsical dictum of the $15,000,000 heiress created a stir. You a girl with millions in her own right—to say nothing more millions to come—is not to be scolded or laughed at, whatever her ideal of manhood is.

Miss Lilla B. Gilbert and Howard Price Renshaw.

Family Wealthy.

Miss Gilbert is surrounded by riches. Besides her own and her mother's fortune, she is to inherit the many millions belonging to her aunt, Mrs. Hitterwise, and a slice of her uncle's millions. Said uncle is William Gould Brokaw. Mrs. Satterwhite was Florence Brokaw. She first married James Martin. At his death six years ago she inherited the bulk of his millions. Her only son died in Paris shortly afterward, leaving one little child, Miss Gilbert has since died. There is, therefore, no direct heirs to the combined Brokaw-Martin millions. Miss Gilbert is Mrs. Satterwhite's only niece and her artificial favorite.

"The formidable list of family and connections need not stagger her dance, however. Mr. Renshaw is the son of Richard Renshaw of Troy, N. Y., who has a summer home at Norston, Ct. He is a grandson of the late Commodore Cicero Price, U. S. N., and a nephew of Mrs. Lily Hargrave, who later became the Duchess of Marlborough and whose son married Consuelo Vanderbilt, daughter of W. K. Vanderbilt.

"Ideal" Shocked Matrons.

When Miss Gilbert first announced her ideas of an ideal man there was a wail from society matrons.

"Ills wants Mr. an Adonis, a Sir Galahad, a Jockey, John Drew and Maurice rolled in one," grumbled the mothers of marriageable men. Now, at the announcement of her engagement, society is counting the men who have gold hair instead of attention. There is a baker's dozen of them, and then a few who modestly hide behind their own lights.

There was Walbridge Taft, the oldest son of Henry Waters Taft and nephew of President Taft; there was Angier Duke, the only son and heir of Benjamin Duke; Jack Darragh, one of the cleverest dancers in society; Nils Fleeman, Allen Hodgkiss, horseman, clean jumper, and blonde, and Dick Lounsbery, a grandson of the wealthy and venerable James B. Haggin and son of the late Richard Lounsbery, sons millionaire himself.

All these fell short, it was said, of one requirement or another in Miss Gilbert's amazing list.

Mr. Duke, for instance, flatly refused one time to hold Miss Gilbert's pet Pomeranian, whence the society beauty immediately deduced that he disliked animals.

Dick Lounsbery refused to say that he doted on Chambers' novels.

And so the list went on.

But Howard Price Renshaw comes forth now as the accepted "IDE." He is apparently the "Ideal."

The other men are taking off their figurative hats to Renshaw.

27 ARE DEAD IN PA. WRECK

LATROBE, Pa., July 6.—The death list of twenty-seven in the collision between a double-header freight and a passenger train near Ligonier will probably be increased today owing to the critical condition of several of the thirty persons injured. The investigation of the crash will be hampered owing to the fact hat only one of the men in the engine crew of the freight escaped death.

The injured were brought to a hospital here or sent to hospitals at Pittsburgh when it was found they were in a critical condition.

13 UNCLAIMED DEAD IN CORNING WRECK

CORNING, N. Y., July 6.—There are still thirteen unidentified dead in the Lackawanna train disaster two miles east of here where forty-one passengers were killed in a rear-end collision. The unidentified dead are six women, five men and an eight-year-old girl and a ten-year-old boy.

In several instances there are no clews upon which identification may be attempted, and several bodies are so badly mutilated that ultimate discovery of their identity seems hardly possible.

It has developed that Mrs. Charles Brandes of New York, who has hitherto been mentioned as among the dead, was not on the train.

The fact became known when Henry Heuer, a cousin of Brandes, arrived at the morgue and identified the latter, but stated that Brandes' wife and four children were at home in New York.

14 FIRES IN DAY; HUNT A FIREBUG

SPRINGFIELD, July 6.—Fourteen fires, one of them costing a life, and another damaging the Sacred Heart Catholic Church considerably, all in a day, have caused considerable excitement. A. A. LAWRENCE DIED TODAY

Amory A. Lawrence, one of the best known business men of Boston, died today at his home, No. 61 Commonwealth avenue. Mr. Lawrence was a brother of Bishop Lawrence of the Episcopal diocese of Massachusetts.

Mr. Lawrence was an overseer of Harvard College, president of the Ipswich mills, and the Salmon Falls Manufacturing Company; director of the Boston & Maine, Maine Central and New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Companies, Dwight Manufacturing Company, Pacific Mills, Boston Manufacturing Company and the Williams Bleachery and Dye Works; treasurer of the Boston Episcopal Charitable Society, trustee of the Church Home for Orphans and Destitute Children; vice-president of the Industrial School for Crippled and Deformed Children, and the Perkins Institute and Massachusetts School for the Blind.

He was also connected with the directorate of a number of Boston banks, and was head of the wholesale dry goods firm of Lawrence & Company.

Mr. Lawrence was one of the wealthiest men in Boston. It was said of him in real estate circles that he owned more land and buildings of good investment than any other one man in the city.

He was born in 1848 and was graduated from Harvard in 1870. He entered the family business house of Lawrence & Company, dry goods and commission merchants.

Mr. Lawrence was married three times. His first wife was Emily F. Silsbee of Salem, to whom he was married in 1871, and three children were born of the union —Amos A. Lawrence, architect; Edith, wife of Harold Coolidge of Boston, and John S. Lawrence, a member of the firm. Mrs. Lawrence died in 1895, and two years later Mr. Lawrence was married to Gertrude, daughter of Warner B. Rice, who died in 1905. He married Mrs. Laura Amory Dugan, who survives him. The funeral will be from Trinity Church on Monday at 4:30 p.m.

MACVEAGH SAYS HE WON'T LEAVE CABINET

DUBLIN, N. H., July 6.—Secretary of the Treasury Franklin MacVeagh today denied reports that he would leave the cabinet next March regardless of the result of the coming election. GOT RID OF TOBACCO HABIT AFTER SIXTY YEARS

Wonderful Success of a New Method

Wins After All Other Means Fail.

This is from a photograph of the veteran Robert J. Sharpe, Allegheny County, Penn., who reports being completely cured of the pernicious habit of smoking and chewing tobacco after he had become—as he believed for years—an incurable slave to the tobacco habit. He came across a book that told the secret whereby he could save himself, and now he is in a superb condition of health—his eyes, heart and stomache are greatly improved.

Lee Babcock, Orange County, New York, averaged 40 cigarettes daily, had tried to give up by his willpower, etc., and could not stop, yet was speedily saved from the tobacco habit through the information in the book here mentioned.

Stuart Miller, Abbeville Co., S. C., was going down hill fast by the tobacco route. He had become thin, weak, nervous, unable to sleep well and could not even go to bed without a cigarette in his mouth. Various remedies did no good until he got the book and was completely rid of the tobacco habit in a few days, after which he gained 4 pounds, sleeps well, has ratior appetite and is delighted.

The above instances are but three of a veritable army of men (and women, too), who learned how to get rid of the tobacco habit quickly and forever, through a valuable, interesting book on "How to Conquer the Tobacco Habit," which anyone can obtain free by writing to Mr. Edward Woods, 534 Sixth Ave., 348 G, New York, N. Y. All who are addicted to tobacco in any form ought to obtain this book, which will be sent in a plain wrapper, free, postpaid.

Tobacco ruins the health. It creates nervousness, loss of will-power and ambition, injures the stomach, weakens the heart, stinks the breath and air, brings on illness, makes the eyes weak, causes loss of manly vigor, ruins the complexion, dims the brain and does many other injuries. Tobacco is often found to be a cause of serious ailments, blindness, deafness, dyspepsia, constipation, lung disorders, neurasthenia, rheumatism and many other troubles. The book, offered free, tells how all this misery can be put aside, while peace of mind, no craving, good health, cheerful disposition and success will prevail. Better cut this out before you forget it. Mr. Woods has the reputation of being an honest, reliable man, and does what he says.

Artist Won by Boston Girl's Portrait

Romances of Boston Studios—No. 3

Romance of Painter and Former Model

PAINTING, "SONG WITHOUT WORDS," FOR WHICH FLORENCE SMITH POSED

Many men have fallen in love with a pretty girl's picture and have later met its girl and married her.

But here is a romance of the Boston art studios in which an artist met a girl apparently did not fall in love till after he had seen a portrait of her, posted by another artist.

The beauty of the painting seems to have aroused in the artist a keener realization of the girl's charm. Announcement of an engagement rounds out the story satisfactorily.

Art Student Model.

The girl in this romance is Miss Florence Gertrude Smith of Somerville, an artist's model and art student. Her engagement is announced to Alfred Trueman, the New York artist, formerly of this city.

A few years ago Miss Smith and Mr. Trueman were both pupils at a Boston art school. They knew each other slightly. Their only interest in common was that they attended the same art school.

But Cupid, apparently, had not paid any attention to the possibility of love between this couple. Or, if Daniel had his opinions, he merely bided his time. Anyway, the two art pupils were merely friends—or hardly friends, more like acquaintances.

Miss Smith was noticed by many artists on account of her beauty, especially her charming expression and her rich complexion. She was asked to pose for them.

Model in Demand.

While continuing her art studies Miss Smith began posing. She was in considerable demand, especially for face and head studies. Meanwhile Alfred Trueman, who had been pursuing his art studies with increasing success, had gone over to New York. Cupid was apparently asleep at the switch.

A few months past Mrs. Marion Boyde Allen, one of Boston's best known artists, asked Miss Smith to pose for her. For several weeks Miss Smith went to Mrs. Allen's studio on Commonwealth avenue.

The painting for which Miss Smith posed was destined not only to become famous in itself, but also to play a tremendously big part in Miss Smith's life. Mrs. Allen posed the fair model, seated in a chair, holding a violin in her hand, as though playing. The model's face was framed in a broadbrimmed hat of white lace.

The title given to the painting was: "A Song Without Words."

Painting Reminds Admirer.

The painting proved an artistic triumph. It was exhibited in this country several times. Then it was selected, from hundreds of competitions, for the Paris Salon of this year, which draws the best work of world's artists.

In one of the New York exhibitions Alfred Trueman was an interested visitor. He saw "A Song Without Words" and was interested immediately. Then he was fascinated, not only with the artistic charm of the picture itself, but with the beauty of the model.

He recognized the girl whom he had known casually while at art school in Boston. He recalled the winsome personality of the girl more and more. It didn't take Alfred Trueman long to make up his mind that he was in love with a girl he had known two or three years before. He came to Boston and renewed the acquaintance formed at art school. With what success, the engagement now announced is sufficient indication.

GOVERNOR OSBORN TELLS WHY WILSON BROKE WITH HARVEY

LANSING, Mich., July 6.—New light was shed on the celebrated Wilson-Harvey controversy by the statement made here of Governor Charles S. Osborn.

When Governor Wilson was in Michigan he called upon Governor Osborn to pay his respects, not as a politician, but as a brother Governor. It was the day after the Harvey incident got into the headlines.

"He told me," said Governor Osborn, "that when he became convinced that Harvey was trying to deliver him to Belmont, he broke with the publisher.

"I think," continued the Governor, "that Woodrow Wilson is as independent as Theodore Roosevelt, and he cannot be controlled any more than Roosevelt can. He cannot be controlled by Bryan any easier than he can by Belmont, and there is less his strength."

All the city's refuse will be dumped forty miles out at sea, as the result of a decision by James H. Sullivan acting Commissioner of Public Works, today. As conditions were, the city was not prepared to have the company start, and for two months the garbage will be dumped at sea.

WELLS BROS. CO. GET CONTRACT FOR CITY HALL ANNEX

Mayor Fitzgerald decided today to award the contract for the new eleven-story City Hall Annex to Wells Brothers Company of New York. The figure is $716,010. Although Wells Brothers were more than $60,000 lower than the next bidder, some of the contractors objected to the contract going to them on the ground they failed to state who the sub-contractors would be. Corporation Counsel Corbett told the Mayor the omission was an irregularity, but not an illegality. The specifications call for Indiana limestone, but if an additional appropriation can be obtained it will be constructed of granite. The contract calls for the completion of the building October 1, 1913.

CARS ARE STONED IN SOUTH BOSTON

A baby was struck in the face by a flying stone, a man was hit behind the ear by another, several passengers received minor bruises, and women fled, half fainting with fright, when four South Boston cars were stoned following a strikers' meeting at Maynard Hall, on D street.

In South Boston District Court today the cases of the seven arrested men were continued till next Thursday at request of Attorney Baldwin, who is acting as court counsel for strikers.

Passengers sprang from the cars and ran at top speed down the side streets. In several cases, motormen or conductors left their cars, and for a few minutes there were lively times, till a detachment of police arrived and dispersed the crowd, making seven arrests.

The men are charged with disturbing the peace and with throwing missiles. The police were hurried to the scene in automobiles. They came from Station 6, and at the corner of East Eighth street, sprang out and plunged into the crowd.

There were 500 strikers in the gathering, and their numbers were augmented by loiterers, men and boys. When the arrests had been made there were attempts at rescue, but the crowds were beaten back and dispersed by the police.

Seven Men Arrested.

The chief trouble occurred on Dorchester street. The men arrested gave their names as follows: Jeremiah Glynn, aged twenty-two, of No. 748 Dorchester avenue; Patrick Kearns, twenty-one, of Malden; Michael F. Schofield, twenty-one, of No. 623 East Third street; Philip Bussey, nineteen, of No 602 East Sixth street; Thomas F. Breen, twenty-two, of Medford; Daniel J. Lane, thirty-one, of No. 14 O street, and William J. Corbett of No. 180 M street.

Other arrests were made later on charges of assault, disturbing the peace, etc.

There were stirring speeches at the Maynard Hall meeting. Organizer Fred Fay said in part:

"I am told that one of the eminent professors of Harvard College has declared that the professional strike-breaker is a hero. I wonder what that professor thinks now of his statement? There was a young Harvard student killed here in South Boston. He was killed while taking the place of the men who are seeking the uplift of their class.

"The Boston Elevated officials have no right to place the lives of their employes in peril through negligence. They are trying to make good their false position before the public. They care not for lives; they care not for anything human.

"The life of that Harvard student can never be repaid, and it can never be condoned."

Organizer Fay announced that beginning Sunday a meeting would be held each night in each of the Elevated divisions.

To Offer Council Order.

Councilman Ernest E. Smith will introduce at the meeting on Monday an order calling upon the Elevated to recognize the union of their employes.

The order which he has drafted reads as follows:

Whereas, Our city is daily the scene of violence and riots, caused by the strike on the Boston Elevated Railroad, and

Whereas, The only question at issue is the right of the employes to join such a union as they desire, and

Whereas, The Boston Elevated Railroad Company has refused to arbitrate in spite of the request of this body, voted unanimously on June 10, and

Whereas, the City of Boston is partner in the Boston Elevated in so far as they share dividends above 6 per cent. and also furnish the capital for construction of the subways.

Now, therefore, We, the elected representatives of the people of the city in session sitting as a City Council, do demand that we grant the right to those employes to organize even as you have been given the right by public bodies, to organize your capital.

Union May Act.

The executive board and attorneys of the Street Car Men's Union have decided that action shall be taken against certain police officials and patrolmen for false arrest and imprisonment of men on strike and against certain "D" officials for impersonating policemen, and also that action be taken against officials in charge of one suburban station for alleged neglect of duty in permitting a boy to remain in the station nearly twenty-four hours without medical attendance, although suffering from injuries inflicted by a policeman.

Walter Briesom of No. 18 Stone street, Charlestown, has sent a letter to union headquarters, charging neglect on the part of an officer, and refusal to arrest a strike-breaking conductor who assaulted him. Briesom's letter reads:

"Tuesday, I was struck by a strike-breaking conductor on a surface car marked Franklin street. I was assaulted when I refused to pay a fare twice. I boarded the car near Kneeland street, going toward Franklin street. I paid a five-cent fare and received my transfer northbound.

Accuses Conductor.

"The conductor asked me for another fare and when I refused to pay he struck me in the stomach. I started to protest. He struck me again. I started to leave the car and he kicked me. I left the car at the corner of Washington street, two blocks from Essex street. The conductor struck me in the head, knocking me unconscious for several minutes.

"I asked the policeman, who is stationed on the corner for assistance. He told me I would be all right in a short time, and directed me to the Grace Hospital. I finally reached the hospital and they said my two ribs were broken. My eye was badly cut and my knee hurt.

"I went to Station 6 and told of the assault. I asked for a warrant and was told to come around the next day and see the chief of police. Later at night I was attended by a physician. My eye was stitched. I have suffered much and am still in bed."

DOUBTS STORY OF LOST GEMS

F. A. Jones, Vice-President of the Eastern Steamship Company, after carefully investigating the loss of a $30,000 pearl necklace on the steamer Bunker Hill, reported by Miss Attilla Thayer, a wealthy New York woman, declares that he doesn't believe the gems were lost at all.

"It looks queer to me," he said, "I have done all I can."

Miss Thayer, who was a passenger on the Bunker Hill from New York to Boston, after leaving the steamer here, sent a telegram back saying that she had lost a pearl necklace. The pearls were done up in tissue paper, she said, and might have been thrown into a bath tub. The wire referred to "two Chinamen who cleaned up the room" as possibly having discovered the gems. No Chinamen are employed on the Bunker Hill and never have been.

If the gems were lost, Vice-President Jones suggests, they might have been wrapped up in the waste paper and laid on the bathtub, in which case they would have been thrown away by the porter.

A further investigation of the crew of the Bunker Hill failed to clear up the mystery.

Miss Thayer, who was accompanied by her maid, occupied stateroom No. 200, an outside stateroom on the main deck, one of the best on the steamer, and left immediately for her Summer home on arriving in Boston Wednesday morning. According to Mr. Jones, the first intimation that the steamship company had of the loss was by a telegram sent by Miss Thayer from Chocorua, N. H., on Thursday, stating that she had lost a necklace. The telegram said that the necklace might have been wrapped up in some waste paper and thrown into the private bathtub of stateroom No. 200.

The Bunker Hill was then in New York, and the offices of the company in New York were notified by telephone. A thorough investigation failed to throw any light on the disappearance of the necklace. The steamer returned to Boston and it was stated by Captain A. T. Hawes that no one on board the Bunker Hill knew anything about the necklace.

The steamship company says they know nothing of the loss beyond what was contained in the telegram from Miss Thayer. They say that the loss was undoubtedly not discovered until Miss Thayer's arrival at her Summer home.

NEW YORK, July 6.—Miss Attila Thayer has a fine residence at Port Washington, Long Island. She is prominent as a society woman and well known in yachting circles, being a member of the New York Y. C. She was among the first seven women entitled to fly the flag of the club.

On July 2 Miss Thayer started for a visit with relatives in New Hampshire, planning to stop in Boston on the way. Her brother, George A. Thayer of Port Washington, said that he saw his sister on the steamer and that while he knew she had considerable jewelry, he was unable to say whether she owned so valuable a necklace.

ASSOCIATE MEDICAL EXAMINER WATTERS HURT IN AUTO CRASH

Associate Medical Examiner William H. Watters is confined to his bed at his home as the result of a side-on collision between his automobile and another, occupied by several Elevated officials, at the corner of Shawmut avenue and West Newton street. Donald Hepron, chauffeur for Dr. Watters, today placed the blame for the collision upon the operator of the Elevated's auto.

"We were going up West Newton street bound for the Hotel Thorndike," said Hepron to-day. "The other car, coming behind us at a rapid clip, crashed into our machine. We were both shaken up. I took Dr. Watters to his home without continuing to the hotel. The rear of our car was practically demolished, while the other car and its occupants got away without injury. I do not know the names of any of the men in the other auto."

Resolved, that we, the workingmen of Greater Boston, wives and wage-earners, hereby petition his honor the Mayor and the City Council for a hearing of the Mothers' Protective Association in order to acquaint them with existing conditions which are responsible for the Boston meat strike.

NEW WOMAN IN HEADLESS CASE

WOONSOCKET, July 6.—The attorneys retained to defend Henry Desbouvre, held in connection with the mystery of the headless body found a few days ago on the bank of the Blackstone River, today investigated the disappearance of Mrs. Octavia Cutteau, who, it has been learned, is missing from the Franco-Belgian colony.

The headless body is alleged by the police to be that of Angele Parmentier-Delmar, but the defence attorneys are seeking to break the identification, and will argue, if possible, that Mrs. Octavia Cutteau may be the murdered woman.

The two women were similar in build and general appearance, and it was stated today that without the head, it would be difficult to identify the body positively either.

Mrs. Cutteau was a close friend of Mrs. Delmar. On this line, the defence believes that the disappearance of the two may be connected, and that the body may prove to be neither.

Under Rhode Island law, no one can be accused of murder, unless the murdered person is identified. Unless the headless body is positively identified as that of Mrs. Delmar, the case against Desbouvre falls flat.

A report was circulated in Woonsocket today that Mrs. Delmar may be in Lawrence. Police officials and representatives of the defence went to Lawrence to attempt to locate her.

Desbouvre will be arraigned July 12, charged with the murder. Torn pieces of clothing, two rusty knives, a bit of rope, a stone and a broken padlock form a strong collection of exhibits in the case.

Desbouvre is making shirts at the State Institution. It was not necessary for him to work, but he asked for employment.

SOMERVILLE MAN IS INJURED WHEN CAR STRIKES ICE WAGON

Charles Morris, thirty-one, of No. 4 Quincy street, Somerville, narrowly escaped death early today when the ice wagon he was driving was struck by a car on Western avenue, near Howard street, Cambridgeport.

The three tons of ice in the wagon were hurled in a literal cascade all about him, carrying him under the feet of the horses.

Passengers on the car, which was inbound from Oak square, Brighton, extricated him and he was rushed to the Cambridge Relief Hospital in a passing wagon. His injuries consisted of cuts and bruises. His right shoulder was wrenched.

The ice wagon was owned by the Fresh Pond Ice Company.

FIVE ESCAPE FROM FIRE IN LYNN HOUSE

Five persons had a narrow escape from fire in a cottage house owned by Mrs. Nora Buckley, No. 20 Charles street, Lynn. The fire started in the rear of the house and burned up through the floor in the sleeping rooms. Patrick Birmingham was awakened by the smoke and without waiting to dress, picked up five-year-old John Buckley and jumped from a window to the ground, a distance of twelve feet, both escaping uninjured. Mrs. Buckley and a little boy, Thomas Birmingham, were rescued. The loss was about $500.

MAYOR ANSWERS BOARD ON LAMPS

Mayor Fitzgerald, to a statement made public today, replies to the criticism of the Finance Commission on the matter of street lighting.

The Commission criticized the Mayor because its recommendations as to installing a new system had not been adopted, and charged that the city is losing money by the delay.

The Mayor's reply reads:

"The investment of $310,000 for the purchase and installation of a lamp outfit is pretty serious business, particularly when there are so many changes in lighting equipment going on all the time. As for the Finance Commission's statement that the city was losing interest by its failure to use this money, I spoke to Mr. Mitchell some time ago about this matter and he said this money was being used temporarily for other city purposes, but that conclusions of the Finance Commission in this regard are not correct."

"Style" Photographers Will Snap Modishly-Gowned Women All Over Shopping District.

Did you "shop" in Boston Monday, Tuesday or Wednesday of this week?

Then watch for your picture in to-morrow's Sunday AMERICAN.

The editor of the Style Contest has arranged to print tomorrow a whole page of pictures of Boston's women shoppers.

And what for, say you?

Why, to prove conclusively to say "doubters" that "Boston is the most truly fashionable city in the country." Miss Laura Lee, the artist, says this is a fact and thousands of others hold similar opinions.

But then there are some who differ. The cameras of the AMERICAN'S photographers are settling the question—and in a manner beyond dispute.

The "style" photographers will circulate all over the shopping district Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week. They will not be stationed in any special place, as they were last week, but they will be plainly in evidence all around the big-store shopping district. You may not see them, but they will certainly see you.

If you went shopping last week or if you go this week, watch the daily AMERICAN every day for your picture. If it does not appear during the week, it may be printed Sunday—when a whole page of them will appear.

The woman whose picture is printed on this page today will receive $5 without delay or inconvenience by calling at the AMERICAN Promotion Dept., No. 5 Winthrop square, dressed exactly the same as in the printed picture.

Watch the "style" pictures in the evening and Sunday AMERICAN, and when your picture appears come in and get the money.

Remember, a whole page of shoppers' pictures will be printed in tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN—and each picture means $5 for the original of it.

PELLETIER AND WALSH RIVALS

David I. Walsh, Democratic candidate for Lieutenant-Governor last year, and District-Attorney Joseph A. Pelletier will cross swords in the Fall primaries for the Democratic nomination for Governor.

Governor Foss is out of the running entirely. "I'm going to get back to business," the Governor said. "When I said two months ago that I would not seek a third term I meant every word. I will neither enter the lists nor accept another nomination."

The Baltimore Convention put Pelletier practically in the running. Pelletier, as Fourth of July orator in Boston, and Walsh as member of the committee that drafted the Baltimore platform, "feel each other, in the practical game of politics for the prize of the Democratic nomination for Governor.

District Attorney Pelletier will have the support of both factions of the Boston Democracy. Originally presented as a candidate for district attorney by the Doyle-Kelliher-Donovan wing of Boston politics, and accepted by the Fitzgerald-Lomasney wing only because the Fitzgerald contest for Mayor was about to break, Pelletier today has the support for the nomination of Lomasney and Fitzgerald. The Mayor's paper today, without objecting at all to Mr. Walsh, has kindly mention for Pelletier.

Governor Foss will give all the help he can to Walsh. He believes the Clinton attorney to be one of the ablest and most popular Democrats in the State. Walsh, as candidate for lieutenant-Governor, made a phenomenal run. He cut the natural Republican majority by over 25,000. During the campaign he spoke in all the thirty-three cities and in over a hundred towns. He was the leading campaign speaker of the Democrats.

The contest between Walsh and Pelletier for the Democratic nomination will arouse State-wide interest.

PRAISES BOSTON PORT FACILITIES

The Grand Trunk will be an incalculable boon to Boston. It means a lot to any port bidding for business, to have a big trunk line enter.

General Hugh Bancroft, his colleagues, and the leaders in the Chamber of Commerce are the most "in earnest" body of men I ever saw.

Boston Harbor is a magnificent body of water. The new Broad Sound Channel will add immensely to its value.

The Boston & Albany terminal facilities in East Boston struck me as the best I've seen in that line on this side of the water.

—A few of the opinions expressed by E. H. Sharwood, secretary of the Philadelphia Maritime Exchange, after a thorough inspection of Boston harbor.

E. H. Sharwood, secretary of the Philadelphia Maritime Exchange for thirty years and leader of the group of Philadelphia experts who have been in Boston studying the dock and harbor facilities, gave the AMERICAN a remarkable interview, praising the Boston port facilities and the work that is being done.

With Mr. Sherwood are George F. Sproule, secretary of the Philadelphia Board of Commissioners of Navigation; John Meigs, assistant director of Philadelphia Wharves, Ferries and Docks, and Winthrop Suitis of Philadelphia, a leader in development work there. The experts have inspected Boston's entire dock system and the others echoed Mr. Sharwood's remarks.

"The great thing that Boston has to look forward to," said Mr. Sharwood, in the course of the interview, "is the coming of the Grand Trunk.

Harbor is Ideal.

"I hesitate to express an expert opinion on such short notice," he said. "I do want to say this, though. We are all tremendously impressed with Boston harbor. Even more, we are impressed with the men back of the movement. They will assuredly bring out the fullest possibilities of the situation. I think that General Bancroft and his colleagues on the Dock Board and the officials and members of the Chamber of Commerce are as thoroughly in earnest about the work as any body of men I ever saw.

"Boston harbor is a magnificent body of water. The intricacies of the present channel are somewhat of a drawback. But the new Broad Sound channel now being dredged will do away with this. Even the present channel is not so bad as in most harbors.

"The general facilities, docking and railroad tracks, of the Boston & Albany terminal in East Boston struck me as the best I've seen in that line on this side of the water.

"The Boston and Maine docks in the Charles and Mystic rivers are less impressive. But an immense amount of freight seems to be handled there, with the facilities they have.

Stand Behind Bancroft.

"I cannot help repeating that in General Bancroft you have a most remarkable man. And from what I have seen the business men of Boston are standing behind him in magnificent fashion.

"The South Boston situation I don't thoroughly understand. I presume that the Grand Trunk will have to come in there, and I want to say that it seems a whole lot to any port bidding for new business to have a new trunk line enter. The Grand Trunk will undoubtedly be a great boon to Boston.

"I can foresee a great future for this port. Your people are tremendously in earnest.

"I want to put in a word about Boston hospitality, too. My associates and I came simply to have a look around. But we have had the best time, and at the same time seen more here than anywhere I ever went. Gen. Bancroft and the Chamber of Commerce are royal hosts.

"I cannot presume to make any suggestions. Your leaders seem eminently qualified to work out the local problems in the best way possible."

CONGRESSMEN WEEKS AND M'CALL ENTRIES IN SENATORIAL RACE

Candidates for Senator Crane's seat are multiplying, according to dispatches from Washington today. Congressman McCall, Congressman Weeks and Congressman Gardner are the latest entrants. Congressman Gardner will withdraw, however, if Curtis Guild becomes a formal candidate.

Several weeks ago Congressman McCall said he would wait until after the national conventions before announcing whether he would or would not run for the Senate. Now he announces he will certainly be a candidate, he will not, however, retire from the House unless elected to the Senate.

Mr. Weeks will announce his candidacy within a few days. None of the Democrats in the House has thus far declared as a candidate.

AMERICAN WINNERS IN OLYMPICS

Drew of Springfield, Caldwell of Amherst and Holden of Bates Score for New England.

In one of the trial heats of the 100-metre dash Donald F. Lippincott of the University of Pennsylvania hung up a new world's record. He ran the distance in the marvellous time of 10 3-5 seconds. Lippincott was brought to Stockholm upon the supplemental list of American runners here. Applegarth of England ran second to Lippincott.

America seems certain to furnish the victor in each of the first three inland events. It is hardly likely that America's entrants in the javelin throw will secure better than a place. Finland promises to produce the winner in tossing the javelin.

J. J. Courtney of the Seattle A. C. was the first foreigner to draw blood in the International Olympic games here today. Courtney won the third heat of the 1500-metre dash after the two heats had been captured by Swedes. Courtney's time was 11 1-5 s.

Luther of Sweden won the first heat by default. Moller of Sweden won the second heat. Szail of Hungary ran second to Moller, and Kankovitch, also of Sweden, ran second to Courtney. Courtney's time was considered exceptionally good. Rice of England won the fourth heat in 11 1-5 seconds. Smedmark of Sweden was second.

The fifth heat was won by Darcy of England and the sixth heat was won by Sau of Germany. Darcy equalled Applegarth's time, while Rau's time was 11 1-5 seconds. Porey of South Africa ran second to Darcy. Rau of Hungary was second in the sixth heat.

Jacobs of England and Clement P. Wilson of Cox College (United States) nearly ran a dead heat in the tenth heat. Jacobs' time was 10 4-5 seconds. Wilson was in his shadow all the way.

Drew of Springfield Scores.

Howard P. Drew of Springfield, Mass., captured the fifteenth heat in 11 seconds, with Kern of Germany second in this heat.

Stewart of Australia was first in the seventh heat with Adler of Belgium second. Stewart's time was 11 seconds flat. Lindberg of Sweden ran the eight heat in 11 2-5 seconds. Vigolo of Bohemia, was second.

Alvah T. Meyer of the Irish American A. C., captured the ninth heat in 11 3-10 seconds. Ginge Shuls was second.

F. V. Belote of Chicago won the eleventh heat. Houlton of France was second.

Ralph Craig, entered by the Detroit, Mich., Y. M. C. A., won the seventeenth heat, with Scouts of Hungary second. Craig's time was 11 1-5 seconds.

The program called for twenty-one heats in the 100 metres today. The finals will be run off tomorrow.

When the American Olympic committee met in New York early in June to select the Olympic team, Lippincott was not considered seriously by the athletic experts. Lippincott had competed at the Olympic tryouts at the Harvard Stadium and had failed to get even a fourth place. He had been beaten out by such youthful runners as Howard Drew of Springfield, Mass., and Charley Rice, the little red-headed runner from Powder Point, Mass., school. However, Lippincott had done some good work in college meets, and it was finally decided to put him on the supplementary list. This gave Lippincott the right to pay his own expenses to Stockholm and be recognized as a member of the American team.

The Pennsylvania runner is not wealthy, and when he was put on the supplementary list he sent up all hopes of going to Sweden. The alumni of Pennsylvania came to Lippincott's aid and advanced enough money to pay his expenses.

Lippincott's time of 10 3-5 seconds is faster than Craig, Drew, Myer or any of the other American flyers have ever run. It is at the rate of about 9 3-5 seconds for 100 yards. In fact it is even better than this, as 100 metres is almost ten yards greater than 100 yards, and it requires greater strength and endurance to run this distance at top-notch speed.

Holden's time was 1 m. 56 seconds.

P. C. Gerhardt of the Olympic Club of San Francisco won the twelfth heat in 11 1-10 seconds. Lukeman of Canada was second. McMillan did not start.

The thirteenth heat proved an unlooky one for the Yankees. H. W. Hellrigl of the Xavier A. C. was eliminated. J. A. Howard of Australia, Rau, was first and Patching of South Africa second. Howard's time was 11 seconds.

Anderson of England won the fourteenth heat, with Rupert B. Thomas of Princeton, N. J., second. Anderson's time was 11 seconds.

Bay State Boy Lands.

The trial heats in the 800-metre race followed those of the 100-metre event. The first heat of the 800 metres was won by David S. Caldwell, of the Massachusetts Agricultural College. His time was 1 min. 58 2-5 seconds, which was near the Olympic record of 1 minute 52 1-5 seconds made by Mel Sheppard of the Irish American A. C. in London in 1908.

Lunghi of Italy ran second to Caldwell. Caldwell stayed in first place until the stretch, when he shot ahead with lightning speed, winning easily. McClure was eliminated. As in the 100-metre, two men qualify in each heat in the 800-metre race.

John Paul Jones of Cornell University (United States) easily won the third heat, defeating Carrasco of Portugal, who ran second. Jones' time was 2 minutes 1 4-5 seconds. Chrysos of Greece ran third. The Seattle A. C. won the fourth heat in 1 minute 58 1-5 seconds. J. L. Tait of Ontario was second in the fourth heat. Mann of England captured the second heat in 1 minute 56 seconds, with Herbert N. Lutman of Cornell University second.

Mel Sheppard Beaten.

Other results in the 800-metre were:

Fifth heat—First, Ira N. Davenport, University of Chicago, second, Hulford, Eng land. Time—2:59.

Sixth heat—First, Harland W. Holden, Bates College; second, Bjoern, Sweden. Time—1:58 1-10.

The greatest surprise of the day came when John D. Sheppard of the Irish American Club, N. Y., finished second to Braxter of England in the seventh heat of the 800-metre run. Time—2:00 2-5.

Eighth heat—First, Andre Lagard; second, James E. Meredith, America. Time—1:57.

Ninth heat—First, Henley, England; second, Rau, Germany. Time—1:57.

But the American contestant entered in the 100-metre except Harold W. Holland qualified for the semi-finals, and Thomas J. Halpin of Boston was the only American who failed to qualify for the semi-finals in the 800-metre.

Drew Again in Front.

Howard P. Drew, Springfield, Mass., won the first semi-final of the 100-metre dash. Only one man could qualify from each semi-final, and Courtney and Gerhardt therefore were eliminated, finishing behind Drew.

Lemming of Sweden broke the Olympic record for the javelin, hurling the spear 193 feet (60.64 metres). The old mark was 179 feet 10½ inches, made by Lemming in London four years ago. In the javelin trials for the best hand, Lemming led the group by making a throw of 174.6 feet. Lemming's victory gave the first score of the day to Sweden, and there was a big demonstration when the Swedish flag at the stadium was run up. One of the regulations of the games is that victory by any team shall be proclaimed by the raising of the flag of that nation.

In the javelin throw Saarusto of Finland was second with a throw of 58.06 metres, and Lindstrom of Hungary third with 55.50 metres.

Patching of South Africa won the second semi-final in the 100-metre in 10 9-10 seconds.

Alvah T. Meyer of America won the third semi-final in 10 7-10 seconds.

Ralph Craig of Detroit, Mich., won the fourth semi-final in the 100 metres, finishing in 10 7-10 seconds. Donald Lippincott of the University of Pennsylvania, won the fifth in 10 7-10 seconds. F. V. Belote of Chicago, took the sixth semi-final. Wilson, Applegarth and Thomas were eliminated. The day's program at the Stadium was finished late in the afternoon.

H. Duffy of the Brookline Gymnasium Association, Ernest E. Chase of East Bridgewater, Augustus Wise of Boston, Joseph O'Connor of Cambridge, William Gaffney of Olneyville, R. Doctors Say Rivers Was Fouled by "Ad"

LOS ANGELES, July 6.—Dr. A. N. Smith, Dr. L. W. Burt and Dr. Byington examined Joe Rivers immediately after he had reached his dressing room, after his fight with Ad Wolgast last night. Dr. Smith stated that he saw the blow struck and that it was a "deliberate foul." Drs. Burt and Byington agreed that the blow was foul and very painful.

Al Herder, official timekeeper for the club, said that it was just nine seconds before the count was to end when Referee Welch began to count. "I don't know how many seconds Welch had counted before I rang the bell," said Harder, "but I know that after I had rung the bell ending the round Welch gave the decision to Wolgast."

Colored Champion Says He Will Retire Labor Day

JOHNSON READY TO QUIT RING

CHICAGO, July 6.—"If Al Palzer wants to fight me, it will have to be arranged before Labor Day. I will fight Palzer on Labor Day if the fight can be pulled off by then.

"But after that date I intend to retire from the ring for good and I never want to see another pair of boxing gloves, either in private or public, and my retirement will not be a 'Black Patti' retirement either."

So stated Jack Johnson, champion heavyweight of the world, on his arrival home.

"I never fought a squarer fight and the statements made as to crooked fighting on my part were absolutely false," declared the champion.

"It was my fight from the start. Flynn kept trying to butt me at all times. I knew if I had the fight my way and had forty-five rounds to fight, so I was taking things easy.

"Flynn could not have gone another round. I kept feeling him out. When I would hit his head, it would go back. I could tell by that that he was going fast. Flynn couldn't have lasted through the tenth round."

One thing which Johnson was very emphatic about was his retirement. No matter whether he had a fight or not between now and Labor Day, the champion declared he would retire for good on the next day.

Johnson said he had cleared $50,000 on his victory over Flynn. He received $31,000 from Jack Curley, promoter, and won $9,000 in betting on himself. "And Mrs. Johnson won $6,000 betting me," laughingly remarked the heavyweight. "She gave odds of 3 to 1."

EAST LAS VEGAS, N. M., July 6.—The last of the fight crowd to reach the forward their various homes today, the rear guard having pulled out of Vegas last night on the California Limited.

Jim Flynn and his faithful cook, Chuck Coleman, going to Pueblo, his home town, while his manager and promoter, Jack Curley, and his bride, were on the same train bound for Chicago.

Flynn departed from Vegas without any considerable regret and with $6,000 safely stowed away in his shoe. In addition, Curley, despite the heavy financial loss he suffered in the final settlement, gave Flynn the big Benz car that he promised him if he would win the battle.

So it was bundled into an express car and shipped to Pueblo, where Flynn will take a few lessons and then drive the car himself.

The only man connected with the fight left in Las Vegas this morning was Referee Smith and he will go to Denver today and thence to Chicago.

Tobacco and Stamps Now Free to Perdue

"Hub" Purdue and President Ward have arrived at an amicable agreement, so the Southern twirler is once again in good standing in the Pilgrim fold.

Asked on what terms he had effected his return to the fighting ranks, Hub said that in the future the club will furnish him with free chewing tobacco and all the postage stamps he may require.

From other sources the information is derived that a substantial increase of salary will be forthcoming at the end of this season if Perdue has done satisfactory work during July, August and September.

TITLE HOLDERS HAVE OFF-YEAR

By JACK CONWAY.

THIS year has been a very disastrous one for ring champions. The Fourth of July in particular was a poor day for the men who style themselves "World's Champion" after their name. It is true that Jack Johnson, Ad Wolgast and Johnny Kilbane were all victorious in their battles on Independence Day but some of these men showed to advantage.

Johnson had an easy time winning from Flynn as everybody in his sane mind expected he would. The big Galveston black toyed with the Pueblo fireman until the uneven contest was stopped by the police. When Flynn realized that he was hopelessly outclassed, he started to fight a foul battle. He butted with his head and did other things which are forbidden by the rules as drawn up by the late Marquis of Queensbury.

Although Johnson won, he failed to perform like a champion. The burly negro is not as good as he was when he battered poor Jim Jeffries around the ring at Reno two years ago. Father Time will soon add Johnson to his list of victims.

Johnson claims that he is now thirty-four years of age but men who have been closely associated with the king of the prize ring say that he is at least thirty-six years of age. And a man at this age is not physically fit to battle with younger, stronger and more ambitious men.

The title holder will experience difficulty in getting matches in the future. He will probably never again be permitted to fight in this country. If he goes abroad, he will be obliged to try concussions with Langford, Jeanette or McVey, and John son does not want to mingle with any of these gladiators. He realizes that he might be defeated by any member of these trio.

IN the meantime the white "hope" brigade is busily adding new members to its ranks. Some of the white heavyweights have shown good form. The majority of them are also young.

Just now there isn't a white heavyweight capable of defeating Johnson, but in a year or so things should be changed. Langford, McVey and Jeanette are also well on in years and none of them are getting any better.

Al Palzer is the king of the white "hopes." This powerful farmer boy has been losing as a professional for only a year and in that time made a wonderful record. He has knocked out such well known fighters as Tom Cowler, Bob Kaufman and Bombardier Wells, heavyweight champion of England.

When Palzer knocked out Kennedy, fight "fans" claimed that the former amateur champion lacked experience and even after Al had knocked Kaufman out in five rounds the "knockers" kept working overtime. They asserted that Kaufman was sick with malaria. But Palzer kept plugging away and has now knocked out Wells.

The Western battler is twenty-two years of age and if handled properly would have a bright future. He is as strong as the proverbial Hon but he is still very crude. If Palzer was pitted against Johnson tomorrow he would be riddled to pieces by the negro title holder. Nick knows too much for him and would probably be able to dispose of him easier than he did Wells.

It may be a different story, however, after Palzer has had more experience. Luther McCarthy has also shown that he knows how to fight. There are several other heavyweights who have been coming to the front with a rush lately.

The negro fighters are now supreme, but unless I miss my guess, a white man will be the heavyweight champion of the world inside of two years.

THE outcome of the Wolgast-Rivers fight is to be regretted. Rivers beat the champion soundly and should have been declared the winner after he had been fouled by the Michigan "Wildcat." The contest was one of the most striking fights—weight battles ever staged in this country. Intense rivalry exists between Rivers and Wolgast and both men fought like tigers from beginning to end.

Wolgast still holds his title, but there is a shadow over it. Rivers says that unless Wolgast gives him a return date he will come out and claim the lightweight championship.

Coast promoters have already started plans for re-matching these two sturdy warriors. If neither bout is arranged, it will likely take place on Labor Day.

Rivers proved himself a hit every bit as hard as Wolgast, that he is as game as the Cadillac farmer and that he is a far better boxer. The champion was wild in delivering his blows and was not as strong as he would be if he was operated upon for appendicitis last Thanksgiving Day.

What has become of Mowrey none of the players or the Cardinals' boss knows. He was last seen when the team played in Cincinnati on Monday, and since then no one has seen him hereabouts. For taking this unexpected leave of absence without permission Bresnahan announces, Mowrey stands suspended.

B. F. Keith's Team Goes Down to Defeat

The baseball nine composed of employes at B. F. Keith's Theatre went down to defeat at the hands of the Metropolitans on the Longwood street grounds to the tune of 15 to 5.

The B. F. Keith's were unable to place in the field the same line up were a decisive victory over the National Theatre team some weeks ago. Billy Fresquez and Jimmy Barter were the battery for the B. F. Keith's. "White Hope" Barnes of Barnes and Robinson pitched for the actors, with Jimmy Royal of the press department at the receiving end.

The B. F. Keith's found considerable difficulty in connecting with Barnes' delivery, the latter being a former Fieldston Cadet league star, and when Barter was put out by a fast tip in the third inning, the actors lost everything in sight that way. The feature of the game was the fielding of Harold Frisk of "The Meisterfingers," and Frank Carter. Eddie Fay of the B. F. Keith's walloped out two two-baggers, but his heavy hitting could not save the day.

Ganzel's Success.

One of the great secrets of the success which John Ganzel has had with the Rochester team the past three years is the carrying of ever utility men. Two of his best workmen, McMillan and Spencer, are out of the game but the team is heading along in front and winning the majority of its games. The veteran Ward also is ever on the first corner, while Johnson's natural position is shortstop.

FRENCH STAR IN CYCLE RACES HERE

An all-star card of races is on the program for the race meet at the Revere cycle track tonight. The events will take in distances from one-half to twenty-five miles and will include match sprints, handicap, open and the motor-paced contest.

Leon "Tricky" Comes, the famous French sprinter, who has defeated all the leading riders at the Newark track, will be the chief follower of racing how they ride in Paris.

The little Frenchman is one of the best short-distance men in Europe, and is in this country in an effort to defeat Frank Kramer for the American championship.

Comes tonight will meet Norman M. Anderson, the Dane, and as both are good match sprint riders, the event should prove interesting. The first heat will be for half a mile and the second for one mile. If a third is necessary the men will toss for choice of distance.

George Wiles of Syracuse, Clarence Carman of New York and Ernie Pye of Salt Lake City arrived in town this morning from the west and proceeded immediately to the track at the beach. All three men are in fine shape for the twenty-five-mile motor-paced race.

Frank Kramer, the South Boston cyclist, has joined the ranks at the beach and will make his initial appearance for the season tonight.

SIGNS FOR FIVE BOUTS.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., July 6.—Ernie Zanders, the Chicago welterweight, but who will hereafter get into the middleweight ranks, was here yesterday and closed a contract with Hugh D. McIntosh's representative, T. S. Andrews, to go to Australia for a series of five battles. Zanders will leave Vancouver on the steamer Zealandia July 18. He has one of these bout in New York with the winner of the Mike Gibbons-Bid Burns contest, but declined in order to make the Australian trip.

Horine Got His Start Driving a Milk Route

George Horine got the start that made him the greatest high jumper in the history of sport by driving a milk route. Others may owe their supremacy to early practice over the crossbar, but not the champion.

Carrying milk is a slow business. To make the deliveries he had to rise before daybreak and work till almost time for school. It occurred to him that the labor would be shortened if he let the horses keep moving and jumped on and off the wagon while it was in motion.

Anyone who thinks that it is easy to jump onto a wagon without vaulting is recommended to try it. Horine practiced until he was able to do it time and time again with a milk can in either hand. The exercise developed the muscles of his legs and gave him the "spring" which made him great.

He was never coached. He developed his own style, distinctly peculiar to his needs. When he came East his form astonished the critics. He practically walks up to the bar, taking only a few running steps. He takes off from the "wrong" leg.

Horine's style is the logical development of his milk wagon beginnings. He trotted out to the wagon, took a couple of running steps, jumped and was aboard. All he has done is to add his peculiar body turn which sends him over the bar in a line parallel to that of the crosspiece.

DODGERS' CLAIM ALLOWED.

CINCINNATI, July 6.—The National Baseball Commission today decided that the Dandis club had purchased Player Davidson from Brooklyn and allowed the latter a claim of $750.

In the case of Pitcher Pfester, who failed to report to the Milwaukee Club for two months after he had been sold by Chicago, the commission held that Milwaukee was not liable for the purchase price.

Thee gave Chicago five days in which to dispose of him without incurring liability to him for salary. For every day that he is retained thereafter, the Chicago club will be required to pay him at the rate of his 1912 contract.

Hunting a Husband

NO. 16—HELEN ROBBINS TRIES TO DEFEND MAYNARD, BUT THE WIDOW WILL HEAR NOTHING OF HIM

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER.

BEATRICE was not mistaken, for, after a moment's reflection, Helen Robbins took up her tale of protest.

"My dear girl," she began deprecatingly, "how do you know that all this talk about poor old Bob Maynard is true? It may be all idle gossip. Indeed, I feel that your viewpoint is but the result of your morbid fancy excited by the fact that he drank a highball in your presence. You are too nervous and touchy with regard to things of that kind, Beatrice, to be able to take a sane view of them."

"I can scarcely see where my viewpoint is not 'sane,'" asserted Beatrice, controlling her voice and manner that she might not show how excited she really was. "Perhaps, Helen, if you had been at the Arcadian, as I was last night, and had seen Robert Maynard so drunk that the waiters were forced to expel him, you might still, in the cause of blind loyalty, disbelieve your eyes and ears. But I can't."

"I'm sure you were mistaken," insisted Helen with the calm and irritating obstinacy of an outwardly amiable woman.

"How could I be mistaken about such an evident thing as that?" demanded her hostess.

"Well, you might easily be wrong about it," reiterated Helen.

Beatrice laughed disagreeably.

"Or drunk myself, why don't you suggest?" she said with angry sarcasm.

"Beatrice!" exclaimed the shocked guest. "Don't be vulgar! But I can't believe my ears when you tell me such things of Robert. By the way, who was with you?" she asked, suddenly.

Helen Defends Bob

"I acknowledge," admitted Helen, "that I have heard from several people that Robert Maynard has been drinking occasionally lately, but not to excess, and I could hardly believe even that. If it is true," she continued, blandly, "I suppose it is because the poor fellow is so lonely and unhappy that he would do almost anything to forget his sorrow for a little while. He misses his wife dreadfully."

"He must!" sneered Beatrice.

"Oh, Beatrice," reproved the widower's champion, "how can you speak in that way—you, who know for yourself what the torture of such bereavement is?"

But the widow did not reply immediately, and, during the silence that followed, Helen looked at her hostess with a gaze in which uncertainty and triumph were mingled. Inwardly Beatrice was fighting against the impulse to dilate further upon Maynard's delinquencies. However artistically and consistently one may maintain a pose or a sham, the time is pretty sure to come when she will suffer because of it or rebel against it. Beatrice felt now that she had reached the point, and for she could not explain to her friend her horror of a drinking man, without tacitly admitting by her manner that she had the unfortunate experience of knowing such a one intimately, then virtually acknowledging her own social hypocrisy in posing as Tom Milnor's bereaved widow.

So, not feeling it safe to talk on the disputed subject, she sat silent by the window, watching the long green shadows cast beneath her by the slowly sinking sun. And, as she watched and mused, her anger died out gradually and her pulses beat more quietly. At last she trusted herself to speak.

"I may have wronged Mr. Maynard," she added, dispassionately. "No doubt the memory of his dead wife is very dear to him. Certainly"—with a flash of sarcasm and a fruitful laugh—"he talks of her enough to justify that supposition."

Helen Robbins drew her chair nearer. "Now, my dear," she said, sweetly—with the manner of one who congratulates herself on having kept her temper throughout a painful discussion—"we won't talk of Robert any more just now. Perhaps you are a little prejudiced on that subject, and besides"—with a slight feline touch—"I am merely his disinterested friend, and you only a chance acquaintance of his, so why should we squabble about the man as if he were ever and dear to us both?"

Beatrice's recently acquired self-control did not desert her, and her demeanor was so calm that her guest did not suspect that the astute remark had had any effect.

"I really came around this afternoon," Helen continued, "to speak to you of pleasanter matters. My John is asking several friends to dine with us tomorrow evening. We're going away to the country in two weeks from now, and the place is all upset, so we can't have anything but a plain family dinner. It's horribly inconvenient, of course, but a man never thinks of that kind of thing, and John says it will be best to have these men now while he is here. So I've asked them often to come, and had always forgotten to set a date. One of them is an artist—the other a physician. Both were at college with John, and he has neglected them shamefully, for as they are old bachelors, and he has a wife and home, we ought to have had them at our house long ago. Now, dear, won't you please help me out by coming tomorrow night to dinner with them? There will be these two strange men, and I have asked Cousin Hannah to make the third woman—but she will not be much of a drawing card, and I do want you."

Accepts Dinner Invitation

If Beatrice felt a momentary impulse to refuse the urgent invitation, it was crushed before the declination reached her lips as she contrasted the dinner, with its possibilities of cheer and pleasure, with the stupid evening meal she would probably have in her own lonely little apartment. Perhaps, too, the phrase, "two strange men," may have tempted her to a favorable consideration of the idea, although she did not admit this fact even to her inner consciousness. But she was a bit surprised to feel how different society and social functions appeared to her within the past few months. Until after her husband's death she felt that men were unworthy a woman's consideration. Later, when she became accustomed to her freedom, she thought of men as selfish, egotistical beings, to whom she had no interest. But since she had tried the wings of that much-petted freedom, and had fluttered out in the world and had proved that she still had the ability to charm mankind, she found herself enjoying the company of the few men she knew, and taking their compliments and homage with a zest and gusto that had heretofore been foreign to her character.

So she accepted gratefully Helen's invitation and became immediately more vivacious and voluble in her talk.

"It is always delightful to dine at your house," she said affably, "and really I have so many lonely evenings that it is a genuine kindness to me when one of my friends invites me away from this quiet little home in which the children are sound asleep by 8 o'clock."

She had actually forgotten her hostile attitude of mind towards Helen—for the time, at least.

"At what hour do you dine, dear?" she asked as her guest rose to go home.

"At our usual hour, 7 o'clock," replied Helen. "I am thoroughly glad that you can come."

"And so am I!" exclaimed Beatrice sincerely.

Gaby Deslys Tells How I Dance the Grizzly Bear—Part II.

DOING THE GRIZZLY GLIDE.

THE "FASCINATION POSE."

NOT MEANT FOR AMATEURS.

By GABY DESLYS

PART II.

THE American dances like the Turkey Trot and the Grizzly Bear which I have been introducing in Europe are taking like wild-fire over here.

In the first place they are new, they are American and they are so different from the old-time waltz. You can make them different, or "Oh! so different," with the accent on the exclamation, according to the way you dance them.

Of course, on the stage one has to be sensational. No one would pay the slightest attention if one merely waltzed around, especially in ordinary clothes. When I am doing a simple little step or dance I am much more particular about having startling and original costumes than when I am dancing a sensational novelty, which is sure to take without the aid of startling gowns.

Oriental Dress

With these American dances I think I have struck on a very happy combination. A dress which is staid, to say the least, and just the kind of thing that one would wear in the street, with a panel of satin in front, and a "V"-shaped bodice. But if you look more closely you will realize that it is not quite as demure as it looks, for under the panels of the front breadth the skirt is arranged into a trouser effect which enables me to kick and dance without being hindered by my skirt. I think this is rather original, just like the dances. Most artists who have clung to the modern evening dress have their skirts slit at the side, but that has been done so much that my innovation was really necessary.

The reason people are so crazy about dancing the Turkey Trot and the Grizzly Bear is because of the syncopated time—the ... ate rocking of the body and swin... f the feet. When the cake-walk first came out, Paris went mad about that, but the cake-walk is a lonesome dance compared with the Grizzly Bear. You can dance a cake-walk all by your self as a "pas seul," but no one can dance the Grizzly Bear without a partner.

The pictures illustrated here show some of our steps and poses in the new dances. Of course, I don't expect ballroom amateurs to copy them, for no girl with a pretty party dress wants to crouch down and half recline on the floor, and, personally, I don't enjoy it myself on the stage, for after each performance my frocks have to be freshly cleaned and renovated, no matter how immaculate the stage hands keep the floor.

All the fancy dances which are founded on Spanish dances—and, of course, you know by this time that the Turkey Trot and the Grizzly Bear came from Spanish South America, via San Francisco—well, all of these dances are built up like the Spanish dances of a certain measure of steps and then a pause or even a full stop of the music during this time the dancers hold the last position of the dance. This position is called a pose, and must be graceful and attractive. Many of the modern dancers make these poses grotesque, but I would not do such a thing. It is all very well for a pretty woman to try to be funny, but no one in the world is beautiful enough to do grotesque things and keep her reputation for grace and looks. Besides that, I think grotesque dancing is inartistic. An artist can get very near the ridiculous, or even vulgar, but the moment she crosses the line she is no longer an artist.

An Imitation

Now, in dancing the grizzly bear I give an imitation, but I hope it is an elegant version of the dancing bear with arms up and knees bent as he begs about. My partner faces me in this and often we cross our arms as in the picture and hop backward or forward or to the side, as we have arranged, according to the music of the dance.

Beginners think this is very easy, but no two people can dance these steps without a good deal of practice, unless they are holding on to each other. The hold is done by grasping each other's shoulders, or if grasp my partner's shoulders while he takes me around the waist with knees bent as in the picture. We hop and sway with the music. This is the real grizzly bear step, and I don't see anything objectionable to it, though of course one can make it so if one wishes to.

After beginning the dance in this way we let go of each other and hop one in front of the other for four steps, as shown in the illustration, each dancer going in the opposite direction, only for two steps each, then stopping and making the other two steps back again, so that you land in the original position with the man back of the girl. The pose for the end of this measure is a backward flinging of the girl over the extended arm of the man behind her.

They now take hands, her right hand being in his right, and she being close to him in the ordinary dancing position. He takes a quick step back, she pirouettes or whirls away from him at arm's length. He pulls her back again and they alternate backward and forward for eight more measures; the final pose ends with her close to him looking into his eyes, in what is called the "fascination pose" of the waltz.

Suddenly each of the partners begins to sway in opposite directions; the girl sways to the farthest, and he catches her around the waist as if she were about to lose her balance. Turning her around so that she faces the audience with her back to him, they once more begin to sway, she bending very low and he catching her. At the end of the eighth measure they are both bent to the floor, where they assume the position illustrated.

Not for Amateurs

I think this is a very pretty part of the dance, it requires almost acrobatic skill, and I shouldn't recommend it for the amateur. In dancing these dances fortunately one can leave out such steps as are not appropriate for the time and the place and adapt others to one's purpose and one's costume. That last item is a very important one for the girl, who will find that the modern frock keeps her from being over athletic or trying any gymnasium tricks in the ballroom.

A Bachelor's Diary

HE HEARS JOSEPHINE IS ENGAGED, AND IS GLAD, ALTHOUGH IT GIVES HIM A PANG

By MAX.

JUNE 4.—I have been out of town on business a week and surprised myself by getting homesick. It is the first time I was ever homesick, and the presence of the two little babies who are making a home of their four walls is responsible.

After an exhausting day's work while away I have hitherto found enjoyment in a good show, or some concert. I made it a point to take my friends, we had supper afterward, and I thoroughly enjoyed the little dissipation.

But none of that appealed to me on this trip. I found myself every afternoon about five o'clock wondering if the children had returned from their drive, and if they were missing me as much as I missed them. Nothing on the elaborate hotel menu tasted as good as the simple little dinners I have at home every night as their guest. I missed Manette's tireless prattle, and more than that did I miss Elizabeth, who has become an adept at eating her dessert with one hand, because of having the other hand in my pocket, or clinging to my arm, or squeezed around my neck.

I missed them so much that one evening I squandered fifteen dollars to hear their voices over the long distance telephone.

There was a very faint "Hello" in Manette's shrill treble, and the sweeter and graver voice of Elizabeth said, "I'm your girl, Uncle Max."

The nurse reported that they were well, and that every morning they asked if that was the day Uncle Max would be home. I had bought each a big doll that opened and shut its eyes and that said "Ma Ma" when punched in the stomach, and when she told how much they were missing me I added a set of child's tea dishes, with a cream pitcher as big as a man's thumb, cups the size of thimbles and plates to match.

He Knows Now

I know now how a child feels just before Christmas, for I felt that way about getting home. Brown & Brown made an engagement with me at 2 o'clock, an important one, but when I found the train left at 2:30, and if I missed that train I couldn't leave till 5, I cancelled the engagement. It would never do to disappoint the kiddies.

I had telegraphed Richards, and she was at the station with the carriage. I caught a glimpse of her on the platform as the train was pulling in. She had a little angel in white on either side of her, and I was the first passenger off the car.

I think for the next five moments I must have looked like a man getting smothered with snowballs, for they were both in my arms, squirming in their delight, and almost choking me to death.

I refused to eat dinner with Mrs. Spencer tonight. I had a prior engagement, I said, and when she presumed on lifelong acquaintance to ask what it was, I said I had an engagement to take tea with my two nieces and it was to be quite a function, for it was to be served in the toy dishes.

"Max," she said, "you are spoiling those children. I am coming over some evening soon to take you to task about it."

Then she laughed. Down in her heart she knew this spoiling process is good for them, and is also good for me.

Mrs. Spencer's Part

Come to think of it, who was it but she kiddies over to ice cream every afternoon I was away? Mrs. Spencer!

Who took them to the beach in her automobile? Mrs. Spencer!

Who goes with Richards to select their clothes, and sees that they get the finest there is in the stores? Mrs. Spencer!

She loves them as much as I do, and spoils them more. That was certainly some kind of a heavenly blunder when all the babies were sent elsewhere, and none ticketed for Mr. and Mrs. Jack Spencer.

Our important dinner function was announced promptly at half past five. Nurse said the children had so much excitement during the day that they couldn't have an extra luxury, not the least bit, and must come upstairs promptly at 7.

Sometimes when we are at the height of our good times, and she comes down promptly on the hour, I wonder if all nurses are as tyrannical and arbitrary. But every desire to rebel is checked by a glimpse at the babies. Fat, red-cheeks, sturdy little legs, straight backs, and splendid chests; how could any one criticise the discipline that shows such perfect results?

A Toy-Dish Dinner

We had a hilarious time at our little dinner party. I drank my share of milk out of a thimble, and passed my plate every minute to get another morsel of lamb cutlet.

Elizabeth presided, and did it so gravely and graciously that I caught a glimpse of her away off in the future presiding at some fortunate man's table.

"Elizabeth," I suddenly asked, while she served me a pinch of rice pudding in a little sauce dish smaller than the hollow of her hand, "would you like to sit at the head of some man's table some day, and smile at him, just as you are smiling at me?"

"I'd like to sit at your table, Uncle Max," she replied.

"I drowned sit at Uncle Dim's table," piped Manette. He's doin' to have dold fish to eat when I stay at his house."

Always fickle Manette, who prefers Uncle Jim because he has promised gold fish, served in rainbow sauce, with butterfly wings on the side!

Josephine Engaged

June 5.—I heard today that Josepain's engagement to Mr. Dribblet is soon to be announced. It will be the best thing that could happen. I am satisfied that when she is another man's wife I will be able to control this longing for her.

I have not seen her since that day in the park. I do not go riding with the children as often as before, because Manette insists that the park be our destination. And Manette, age 5, always has her way.

I am always waiting on the porch for them when they return, and invariably Manette begins to tell about her "bootiful lady." Somewhere, somehow, on their rides through the park they have invariably seen Josephine, and she seems to have completely won Manette's heart.

She brought home a doll today which she said her "bootiful lady" had given her, and I took it from her, mindful for a messenger boy and sent it to Josephine's home. It was a brutal thing to do, but I had to do it. It was the first time I had ever made Manette cry, and she certainly did the occasion justice.

I finally brought her back to smiles by calling for the carriage and sending her down-town with Richards to buy another doll.

"You are spelling that child," said Mrs. Spencer, who had come running across the lawn at the rare sound of a child's cry. "For there are good children and children cry.

"Max" she said, when the carriage had turned the corner, and we had sent tender words after the little tear-stained face of Manette, "these children must have a governess."

I gasped. I hadn't thought of that. "Surely," I stammered. "Richards is sufficient to all their wants."

A Governess!

"They must have a governess," she repeated. "And I have engaged one for you. She will be here tomorrow evening to make arrangements."

Then she turned around and walked home before I had a chance to say a word.

But would I have rebelled if I had had the chance? I believe not, for whatever the children need they must have.

But a governess! A woman who wears spectacles and looks like the head line in a copy book, and who will disapprove of our baby talk because it isn't the language approved by the American text book societies!

Truly, we are beginning to know the pangs of growing up!

FOR a little while no one spoke. Mensmore at last broke out cagerly:

"Don't act absurdly, Gwen. I cannot even guess where all this talk about the furniture is leading us, but I do know that you are as innocent of any complicity in Lady Dyke's death as I am, so it is better for you to help forward the inquiry than to retard it."

"I am not innocent," said Mrs. Hillmer, her words falling with painful distinctness upon the ears of the three men. "Heaven help me! I am responsible for it!"

Her brother started to his feet and caught her by the shoulder.

"What folly is this," he cried. "Do you know what you are saying?"

"Fully. My words are like sledge hammers. I will forever feel their weight. I tell you I am responsible for the death of Lady Dyke."

"Then how did she die, Mrs. Hillmer?" said Bruce, whose glance sought to read her soul.

"I do not know. I do not want to know. It matters little to me."

"In other words, you are assuming a responsibility you should not bear. You were not even aware of this poor lady's death until I told you. Why should you seek to avert suspicion from others merely because Lady Dyke is shown to care met her death in your apartments?"

"But how is it shown?" interrupted Mensmore vehemently. He was more disturbed by his sister's unaccountable attitude than he had ever been by the serious charge against himself.

"Easily enough," said White, feeling that he ought to have some share in the conversation. "A piece of the damaged fender picked in your room, Mr. Mensmore, was found in the murdered lady's head."

"Was it?" he cried. "Then, by Heaven, I refuse to see my sister sacrificed for anybody's sake. She has borne too long the whole burden of misery and degradation. I tell you, Gwen, that if you do not save yourself I will save you against your will. That furniture came to my room because—"

"Bertie, I beseech you, for the sake of the woman you love, to spare me."

Mrs. Hillmer flung herself on her knees before him and caught hold of his hands, while she burst into a storm of tears.

Mensmore was unnerved. He turned to Bruce, and said.

"Help me in this miserable business, old chap. I don't know what to say or do; my sister had no more connection with Lady Dyke's death than I had. This statement on her part is mere hysteria, arising from other circumstances altogether."

"That I feel acutely," said the barrister. "Yet some one killed her, and, whatever the pain that may be caused, and whoever may suffer, I am determined that the truth shall come out.

"I tell you," wailed Mrs. Hillmer between her sobs, "that I must bear all the blame. Why do you hesitate? She was killed in my house, and I confess my guilt."

"This is rum business," growled Mr. White aloud, half unconsciously.

At that moment the door opened unexpectedly, and Smith entered.

Before Bruce had time to reprimand an order to his astounded servitor the man stuttered an excuse:

"Beg pardon, sir," he said, "but Sir Charles Dyke has called, and wants to know if you will be disengaged soon."

The Letter

QUICK on the heels of the footman's stammered explanation came the voice of Sir Charles himself.

"Sorry to disturb you, Bruce if you are busy, but I must see you for a moment on a matter of the utmost importance."

There was that to his utterance which betokened great excitement. He was not visible to the occupants of the room. During the audible silence that followed his words they could hear him stamping about the passage, impatiently awaiting Bruce's presence.

Mrs. Hillmer quietly collapsed on the floor. She had fainted.

The barrister rushed out, calling for Mrs. Smith and responding to Sir Charles Dyke's proffered statement as to the reason for his presence by the startling cry:

"Wait a bit, Dyke. There's a lady in a faint inside. We must attend to her at once!"

Mrs. Smith fortunately was at hand, and with the help of her ministrations, Mrs. Hillmer gradually regained her senses.

After a whispered colloquy with White the barrister said to Mensmore:

"You must remove your sister to her residence as quickly as possible. She is far too highly strung to bear any further questioning tonight. Perhaps tomorrow, when you and she have discussed matters fully together, you may be able to send for us and clear up this wretched business."

For answer Mensmore silently pressed his hand. With the help of the housekeeper he led his sister from the room, passing Sir Charls Dyke in the hall. The baronet politely turned aside, and Mensmore did not look at him, being far too engrossed with his sister to pay heed to aught else at the moment. As for Mrs. Hillmer, she was in such a state of collapse as to be practically unconscious of her surroundings.

She managed to murmur at the door:

"Where are you taking me to, Bertie?"

"Home, dear."

"Home? Oh, thank heaven!"

They all heard her, and even the detective was constrained to say:

"Poor thing, she needn't have been afraid. She is suffering for some one else."

Sir Charles Dyke grasped Bruce's arm.

"What on earth is going on?" he said.

"Merely a foolish woman worrying herself about others," replied Bruce grimly.

MRS. HILLMER MAKES A STARTLING ADMISSION.

(Posed by Blanche Ring and other members of "The Wall Street Girl" Company.)

"I am not innocent," said Mrs. Hillmer; "heaven help me. I am responsible for it."

"But those people were my old friends, Mensmore and his sister?"

"Yes."

"What are they doing here?"

"Mensmore has been brought back to London by Mrs. Hillmer to face the sinister charges made against him with regard to your wife's disappearance. They came here by their own appointment and——"

"Did I not tell you that this charge against Mensmore was wild folly on the face of it?"

"So it seems, when we have just discovered that your wife was killed in his sister's house and Mrs. Hillmer persists in declaring that she was responsible for the crime."

"Look here, Bruce, don't toss your head like everybody else mixed up in this wretched business." My wife is not dead."

"What!" The cry was a double one, for both Bruce and White gave simultaneous utterance to their amazement.

"It is true. She is alive all the time, I have had a letter from her."

"A letter! Surely, Dyke——"

"I am neither mad nor drunk. The letter reached me by this morning's post. I came here with it as fast as I could travel. I have been in the train all day, and am nearly fainting from hunger."

"Where is it?" cried White. "Is it genuine?"

"I could swear to her writing amidst a thousand letters. Here it is. I have brought some old correspondence of her's for the purpose of comparison, as I could hardly believe my eyes when I first received it."

Bruce was so dumfounded by this remarkable development that he could but mutely take the document produced by the baronet and read it.

He himself recognized Lady Dyke's handwriting, which he had often seen—a clear, bold, well-defined script, more like the calligraphy of a banker than of a fashionable lady.

The letter was dated February 1, bore no other superscription, and read as follows:

"My Dear Charles—I have just seen in the newspapers the announcement of my death, and the theories set on foot to account for my disappearance on November 6. This seems to convey to me the strange fact that you have not received the explanation I sent you of my reasons for leaving London so suddenly. Otherwise you must have kept your own counsel very closely. However, I do not now desire to reopen the question of motive; let it suffice to say that no one save myself was responsible for my disappearance, and that neither you nor any one acquainted with me will ever see me again. Do not search for me; it will be time wasted. If you have legal proof of my death and wish to marry again be satisfied. Tear up this letter and forget it. I am dead—to you and to the world. You can neither refuse to accept the genuineness of this letter nor trace me by reason of it, as I have taken such precautions that the latter course will be impossible. Let me repeat—forget me.

ALICE."

The barrister carefully refolded the sheet after scrutinizing the watermark against the light, and noting that the paper was British made; he then examined the envelope. The obliterating postmark was "London, February 4, 9 p. m., West Strand." The office of delivery was "Wensley, February 6."

"Posted at the West Strand postoffice on Saturday," he said. "Detained in London all Sunday, and delivered to you this morning in the North."

"Exactly."

The Flirtatious Married Woman

By DOROTHY DIX

A POOR, bewildered, disgusted married man asks me this question:

"Why do middle-aged married women flirt?"

The answer is, because they are fools.

Nobody with a grain of sense in her head would risk so much for so little as the married woman does when she engages in a flirtation. On the one side are the love and trust of her husband, the respect of the community, home, children, social position, the assured income. On the other, the pleasure of having her vanity tickled by the thought that she can still attract the attention of men. With the price of divorce, and the loss of everything worth having for a woman.

There is no other such one-sided game in the world, and the marvel of it is that any human being, outside of the home for the feeble-minded, could be found reckless enough and silly enough to engage in it. Yet there are thousands of women who stake their happiness on this desperate venture.

It is incredible, but it is true, that there are women who have all the goods the gods provided; who have kind and generous husbands, luxurious homes, beautiful clothes, lovely children; who are not satisfied with all these blessings—but are never happy unless they think they have secured the admiration of every man in sight.

Such women carry on clandestine acquaintances with men their husbands do not know; they write foolish, sentimental letters that compromise them; they run after celebrities, and they form the following and make the fortunes of all sorts of fake prophets and exploiters of occults. Without them the fashionable preacher could not go to Europe for six months in the year nor the fashionable doctors roll around in limousines. Nor is there any extent to which they will not go in their mad desire to attract the attention of men. If there is nobody else about, they will make eyes at the discreetest old rounders that hang about cafes and roadhouses or the very waiters that serve them.

Age, that should bring intelligence and discretion, seems to bring to these women only an additional recklessness and folly, so that they are less careful of their conduct than the flightiest girl would be. Yet they know, if they would only stop to think, that the faults that the world excuses in youth it does not excuse in sober maturity.

Silly, Fat and Forty

It is a curious fact that the most susceptible time of a woman's life is not when she is sweet and twenty, but when she is fat and forty, and old enough to know better. But she doesn't. A young girl may suspicion a man's motives and assay his compliments to see how much of veracity is in them, and weigh his vows of devotion to ascertain how heavy they are with real feelings, but the middle-aged woman's vanity is so hungry and so wrenching that she swallows whole every honeyed speech a man makes her.

Possibly this explains the middle-aged married woman who still tries to flirt, but it does not excuse her. Nothing excuses her except the assumption that she has not enough gray matter in her head to comprehend the danger she runs and the harm she does, and the certainty that she has not enough sense of humor to perceive the figure of fun she makes of herself.

For there is nothing under the sun more grotesque that the spectacle of the middle-aged mother of a family aping the airs and graces of a debutante, and trying to get kittenish and cute when her antics are only those of a performing elephant. Yet how often do we see this done, and how many women do we know and laugh at, who believe themselves to be fascinators because they are surrounded by a horde of sycophantic men who flatter them for the sake of eating the dinners and sitting in the opera boxes, and spending week-ends at the country places that the women's husbands pay for.

I am sure that if any of these flirtatious middle-aged married women could hear what their adulterers say of them behind their fat backs they would be instantly and forever cured of the belief that they were second edition Cleopatras, with wrinkle and age proof charms.

These married flirts consider themselves good women and pillars of society because they hold to the letter of the moral law and only transgress the spirit. But they judge themselves too leniently. The wife who seeks the admiration of other men than her husband, and who lures them on, as well as she is able, into making love speeches to her, is false at heart and untrue to her marriage vows. She has no reason to draw her skirts away from her sisters of the street. Indeed, they may be better women than she is, for she, at least, has not known their temptation.

Her Iniquitous Offence

It is one thing for a woman to be driven into wrong-doing by hunger, and cold, and want, or some deadly injury that has been practiced upon her. It is another thing for her to deliberately dally with sin, the finery her husband has given her on her back, within the shelter of her home, and with the tenderness and love of a good man protecting her.

Yet that is what a flirtatious married woman does, and it makes her offence a particularly iniquitous one. It is hard on a woman to be married to a man who is flirts, but it is doubly hard on a man to have a flirtatious wife; because society pities and puts a halo about the head of the wife who forgives her husband's amours; it sneers at the man and calls him an ugly name if he shuts his eyes to his wife's faults in this particular.

For this reason, and because when a woman marries a man and he gives her his name, she is more bound in honor to keep it clean than if it were her own, no married woman with any sense of decency has a right to engage in a flirtation. Men friends she may have. Charming she may be to them in her truth and loyalty and devotion to her family, but for her the days of love dalliance are over. No man may make love to her without insult. She may not listen to it without degradation.

And beyond all this is the folly of it—the supreme idiocy of risking everything in the world worth while for the sake of a handful of lying compliments.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS; FINANCIAL NEWS

Stock Market Still Quiet, But Tone Is Better

By W. H. ROSS.

STATE STREET, July 6.—There was a fair demand for copper shares in the Boston market today and the tone was firmer. Price changes were narrow as a rule. Isle Royale, North Butte and Superior closed with substantial gains. Outside of the coppers there was not much trading on the local exchange.

Irving J. Sturgis of Gay & Sturgis will sail for Europe on Tuesday and plans to take an automobile trip through the Austrian Tyrols. He will return late in August.

The New York market continued dull, but most active stocks closed higher.

It is reported that the Butte & Superior strike in Butte & New York ground is growing in importance, the ore body being fifteen feet wide and the ore averaging 50 per cent. zinc, 10 ounces silver and 3 per cent. copper to the ton. D. C. Jackling says the Butte & Superior mill is running perfectly to full capacity, and making a saving of 94 per cent. to 96 per cent. of the values.

A representative of the metal brokerage firm of Morrison, Kokewich & Co. of London, who came to this country to look for alleged "hidden stocks," said to the Boston News Bureau:

"Reports of large stocks of copper not appearing in the published statistics I believe to be wholly without foundation. I have visited all the leading copper houses in New York and every one was pleased to say that there are no hidden stocks of the metal in the United States. From these and other sources I have reason to believe that such is the case. In Europe there are no large reserves unreported. We have implicit faith in the statistics of the Copper Producers' Association in New York, believing them fully to set forth the true conditions of the metal in the United States. Foreign figures which appear fortnightly in London are unreliable."

Bernard W. Trafford has been elected a vice-president of the First National Bank. He has resigned as commercial vice-president of the control group of the Telephone companies, operating in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin, with headquarters at Chicago, to enter the banking business.

Better Tone in New York.

On the whole it may be said that the New York market opened with a better tone that was manifested in Boston yesterday. Some stocks sold fractionally lower at the start today, but after a few minutes prices generally moved to higher levels.

In early transactions Reading and Canadian Pacific suffered the greatest losses. There was unfriendly selling against them which caused Canadian Pacific to sag in London. This was reflected on this side of the water. Reading soon rallied and during the first hour there was gains for U. S. Steel Common, Pennsylvania, Amalgamated, American Smelting, Union Pacific, Atchison and Utah Copper. The New York Traction stocks were a little irregular. The market was not active on the whole and trading seemed to be accented by more or less uncertainty. It was a very professional affair besides.

The curb was quiet.

In the London market there was little demand for American stocks, but they ranged above New York parity. The attendance at the stock exchange there approached a low record, most brokers going to the Henley regatta. Consols went to a new low record. Selling in Paris had a depressing effect on copper shares.

Latest Talk About Copper.

Any reduction in the price of copper below 12½ cents a pound is considered to be almost out of the question, who had to have small quantities of cheap metal. It is said that this kind of copper was sold at 11½ cents. However, it is reported that fifty tons of electrolytic was sold in the New York metal Exchange yesterday for September delivery at 12¼ cents.

There is no business for copper reported by leading selling agents, the nominal price of 12½ cents. Interests have switched partly because of a steamship strike at Havre, although London and all American producers have been handicapped in shipping to that port for the past two months. The other side of the question is the verdict of the Copper Producers' Association on Tuesday next.

Thompson, Towle & Co. quote "one of the best informed men on the copper situation" as saying: "I would not be at all surprised if the stocks of the metal as of July 1 showed neither a decrease nor an increase, but were about a standard. Copper exports during the month of June were 50,000,000 pounds due to the fact that there were insufficient vessels to carry the metal to Europe. This is simple, as Vessels are not taken for ore but for refineries for several weeks, owing to the time of loose lines. This is particularly true when looking for larger stocks of the metal on hand on this side of the Atlantic. On the other side of the water many of the steamers which did leave have been held up at Havre, which has made it impossible to unload their copper. In London and Antwerp this condition has been much the same as a result of this the copper stocks in Europe have been drawn upon, and therefore a large decrease of approximately 10,000,000 pounds has been shown."

Financial News in Brief.

Justice Gerard of the New York supreme court has continued the injunction obtained by the stockholders of the Boland Realty Co. restraining the New York Central from selling and the New York, New Haven & Hartford from buying the majority stock of the Realty Co.

On July 18 the New York Consolidated Exchange will open at 9:30 a. m. for regular call for active stock prices. It is expected that this innovation will provide the exchange with more business.

Valiant stockholders object to that feature of the reorganization plan which provides for their being assessed to obtain funds to retire the refunding bonds. Many of them think all assessment proceeds ought to be devoted to developing the railroad.

His attorney in New York says he has received a cable-gram from Reinhardt announcing that the ship he is sailing on will reach Boston on July 12. The bankruptcy case against Reinhardt in London is to come up on July 15.

British railways have touched the lowest price in eighty years, and one reason assigned is that these securities are not a favorite investment. The average Britisher is looking for more income to turn than consols yield.

The report of Hayden-Clay refineries, including some of the biggest in the country, as to March earnings, show a gain of 4½ per cent. to gross on increase of nearly a per cent. in expenses and 2½ per cent. in net.

The estimate of Missouri Pacific finances is that the net surplus for the month of June will show only $1,000,000. The earnings of the road have increased for two months of the fiscal year.

The Virginia-Carolina Chemical Co. will soon issue a report for the year ending with May, on the last day of that month its working assets, exclusive of materials and supplies, amounted to $27,793,783. Current liabilities totalled $9,975,653, leaving a working capital of $11,004,130. Surplus, subject to the close of the year amounted to $9,451,934, an increase of $101,560 over the close of the 1911 year.

These bonds are issued by the International Magazine Company, which owns and publishes the Cosmopolitan Magazine, Motor and Motor Boating, the three leading publications in their lines, on which this Million Dollar Bond issue is a first lien.

These 6% gold bonds are also guaranteed by William R. Hearst, and are protected by Twenty Million Dollars of assets.

The earnings of the Cosmopolitan Magazine, Motor and Motor Boating last year on which taxes were paid to the United States Government, were over five times the annual interest on this bond issue.

The Cosmopolitan reserves the right, however, to reject any or all subscriptions.

These bonds offer as safe and solid an investment as can be found in the United States and at the same time pay 6% interest.

END OF PRINCESS CONTEST TODAY

By THE PRINCESS EDITOR.

The Princess contest ends today.

The vote coupon in today's AMERICAN is the last one to be printed.

This means just one thing: That you must get every one of today's votes that you can possibly obtain.

Candidates are allowed one week in which to collect and turn in all votes. No coupons received after next Saturday, July 13 at 5 p. m. will be counted. Those sent by mail must show postmark previous to 5 p. m. Saturday, July 13.

Don't be over-confident! You may think you have a safe lead for any one of the prizes, but don't be too sure. It's better to have a few thousand votes too many than too little.

Watch for the new vote list tomorrow. It will contain a record of all coupons received up to last Wednesday at 11 a. m.

Candidates are notified that all votes for the list of Sunday, July 14, must be in before next Wednesday, July 10 at 11 o'clock a. m. This will be the last published standing before the winners are announced.

Up and up you go, girls!

"As ye sow, so shall ye reap."

Miss Lillian Murley of No. 39 Hinckley street, Somerville, has most of the Elevated employes assisting her. She is the ticket-seller at Sunday Hill square station in Cambridge and is putting up a hard fight for first honors.

$12,000 ICE HOUSE FIRE AT SWAMPSCOTT

The Marblehead and Swampscott fire departments were called out to protect the Telesco Club, when the ice houses and barns of Johns. O. Porter, near the Marblehead line, were destroyed by fire, with a loss estimated at $12,000. There was no loss to the buildings, and it is thought that the fire may have been set by tramps.

MRS. FISH TABOOS SATURDAY DANCES

NEWPORT, July 6.—Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, the noted leader of Newport and New York society, who gives most delightful entertainments, has set an example to other hostesses in the matter of Sabbath observance. The society matron has come out strongly against Saturday night entertainments which have been prolonged until the early hours of Sunday morning. Mrs. Fish will give a ball to Miss Helena Fish, Hamilton Fish's daughter, early in August, but it will be on some other evening than Saturday.

Under a New Congo Rule Only MEN Are Flogged

But in This Country Parents That Are Savages Still Flog and Frighten Little Children

Copyright, 1912, by American-Journal-Examiner.

Read an announcement of reforms in the Congo. Sir Edward Gray, the British Foreign Minister, issues the following interesting piece of news regarding the punishment of natives:

> Flogging is limited to twelve strokes, old men, the sick, women and children being entirely exempted, and if fainting or the appearance of a wound supervenes as a result, the application of further punishment is forbidden.

In these civilized days, with flogging forbidden in the navy and in the prisons, it seems shocking to read of Congo negroes flogged. Even limiting the whipping to twelve strokes and ceasing punishment if the beaten man faints or a wounds appears does not mitigate the horror of it.

Almost every man and woman reading the paragraph about "milder punishment" in the Congo is horrified to think THAT THERE SHOULD BE ANY FLOGGING AT ALL.

But among those that are horrified at the idea of flogging full grown Congo natives, there are unfortunately not a few parents brutal and ignorant enough TO WHIP THEIR OWN CHILDREN.

A full grown Congo native with a tough skin, a tough body, and a more or less toughened nervous system is pitied when he stands up, helpless, and receives the blows that fall upon his back.

What about the delicate, nervous children, feeble in body, suffering the intense agony of fear, whipped by the fathers and mothers one moment and told to love the father and mother the next moment.

What could be more horrible, more disgraceful than the sight of an angry man or woman beating a defenseless child?

FOR BEATING IS ALWAYS DONE IN ANGER. The father or mother pretending to beat the child "for the child's good," and pretending not to be angry when the beating is administered, is untruthful as well as brutal. Every blow is given in anger. There is no other blow.

There is a story of a child that had been saying its prayers listlessly. One evening after being beaten severely by its mother the child was eager to pray and said to the nurse, "I want to pray, because I've got something to say to God." And then the child prayed that God might cut off both of its mother's arms "so that she cannot beat me any more."

Such a prayer would shock mothers and fathers, but such a prayer unspoken has been in the heart of many a child, cruelly beaten, and the prayer was justified.

The beating of convicts, the beating of adult Congo natives, the flogging of sailors—such things are horrible.

Infinitely worse is the beating of children. It hurts the body and stunts the mind. It kills courage which alone takes a human being safely through life. It makes the child a liar and a hypocrite. It makes the child hate its father and mother, AND IT SHOULD HATE THE FATHER OR MOTHER THAT STRIKES A COWARDLY BLOW THAT CANNOT BE RETURNED.

This world will be civilized when we are able to exercise in our own homes and for the benefit of our own children the sympathy that we send now to the Congo to the tall, six-foot black man crying under the lash. Think of your own children first. If you strike a child you are a savage and a coward.

Duty of "Instructed" Delegates

How long does a State's "instructions" bind its delegates in a national convention?

This was a question frequently discussed and variously construed at Chicago and at Baltimore. The answer should be plain.

When the people of a State in free consideration of several Presidential candidates come to the primary polls and give a majority vote for one of those candidates it ought to be perfectly clear that the man so voted for is distinctly and definitely the choice and preference of the people, whose wishes are sovereign and conclusive. It is a matter of common sense and common loyalty that delegates so chosen should expend every effort of advocacy and endurance to put into execution the wishes of the people whose servants and messengers they are.

And this advocacy and effort are by no means discharged as an obligation when some designing politician or some scheming interest may urge that the choice of the people is hopeless. No candidate can be honorably deserted by "instructed delegates" so long as he is in the lead, certainly not while he has a majority of the votes, and not even while he leads a loyal and undismayed minority with a hope of his success.

There was more than one delegation which violated and forswore its "instructions" at Baltimore and at Chicago. If the States that "instructed for Clark" had been loyally obeyed by their delegates "as long as there was a reasonable hope of Clark's success" Clark would have been the nominee on the fourth day of the convention.

Of course, all "State instructions" should provide some discretion for the delegates who represent it. The absurdity of robbing delegates of all discretion was illustrated at Baltimore in the ridiculous case of Georgia—bound by an ironclad instruction to vote for Underwood "UNTIL HIS ELECTION IS SECURED."

Under this foolish resolution the Georgians really had no right to vote to make Wilson's nomination unanimous. The man who wrote that resolution ought to have his head put under cold water and be retired from further duty as an instructor of delegations.

A Summer Dream

These are the days that we'd like to go
Up in the snow with the Eskimo,
Leaving the heat of the baking street,
Dusty under the shuffling feet.

There's something nice in unlimited ice
And the dripping seal has a cool appeal,
But business calls from the skyscraper walls
That the Eskimo has his pile of snow,
But we must hustle a pile of dough.

Ill Temper as Destroyer of Good Looks---Good Done by Those of Sunny Disposition

HAVE you a disagreeable face?

Go at once and look in the mirror.

Study your countenance, and analyze the prevailing expression.

There came into a street car one day a young woman dressed in taste and possessing handsome features.

But her face was repellant to behold.

The corners of her fresh young lips turned down.

Her brows were brought together with a disagreeable half-frown.

Her large eyes shot forth most unpleasant glances, and she seemed to affect the car like an open door through which a cold east wind blows.

It was not a mere mood; for the face was so stamped with ugly tempers and angry, petulant moods that any observer could not fail to see the unfortunate young woman had long indulged herself in those states of mind, which eventually destroy all beauty.

A young man of fine moral character, splendid mental qualities, a good heart, and a handsome physique, has marred the whole opulent outfit by a "grouchy" state of mind.

He finds one person in his acquaintances to praise where he finds twenty to score; he approves of one thing in life where he disapproves of fifty. He is quick to condemn and slow to praise; and all the time he believes it is his wonderful "SENSE OF JUSTICE" and his great "power of discrimination" which causes him to take this attitude toward the world.

He does not realize that he is weakening his power for usefulness, and increasing the misery of the world, and all the evils in it, by dwelling so persistently upon that mental plane.

If you do not like discords in music, how absurd it would be to sit down at the piano and to keep striking the keys, making such sounds in order to call the attention of the world to their unpleasantness.

Your time would be better employed PRACTISING HARMONY.

If the world seems to you full of cruelty and coldness and selfishness and ice, go about your business and show it how beautiful are KINDNESS, WARMTH, SYMPATHY and VIRTUE.

That is the most effective and practical and prompt way to interest the public in your ideals of better living.

GIVE IT A SAMPLE.

You can never improve anything or anybody by making yourself disagreeable and obnoxious in manner, speech and conduct.

A fault-finding and over-critical and carping manner is all of those things.

No matter if you are finding fault with great evils, and great drawbacks to progress, and great flaws in our civilization; yet, if you carry a "grouchy" face, an aggressive manner and an irritating voice with you, then you are disagreeable and obnoxious; and you are making the world worse instead of better.

YOU ARE BECOMING A PUBLIC NUISANCE.

Many reformers are that.

And they repel, instead of attract, those who might be won over to their views of equity and justice if they went about their reform work with a happy face and magnetic personality.

One of the greatest and most humane-hearted reformers the world has known was Henry George.

And his face was a benediction. And his voice would win a crying child to smiles.

The longer I live the more I am convinced that the very best way to cure the world of its sickness is to TALK HEALTH.

The best way to cure it of its mistaken idea of finding happiness in immorality is to talk (and PROVE IT BY ACTION) the happiness found in morality.

The best way to cure it of selfishness is to talk and live UNSELFISHNESS.

The best way to drive its gloom away is to SMILE AND LAUGH IT AWAY. Emerson said:

"NERVE US WITH INCESSANT AFFIRMATIONS. DON'T BARK AGAINST THE BAD, BUT CHANT THE BEAUTIES OF THE GOOD."

Julia Ward Howe said:

"THE DEEPER I DRINK OF THE CUP OF LIFE THE SWEETER IT GROWS.

Another great soul, whose name I do not know, said:

"I AM NOT FIGHTING MY FIGHT; I AM SINGING MY SONG."

Henry Harrison Brown (who lost everything but life in the great earthquake) says:

"FROM ALL LIFE'S GRAPES I PRESS SWEET WINE."

If you have a gift for speaking, or writing, and you know that great evils exist which must be talked or written about in order to awaken the public mind to a reform, then go ahead and put your whole soul into an appeal for a reform.

But do not carry a "grouchy," critical face and mind about with you, day after day, and expect to reform the world in that way. You are only adding to the unpleasant things in life.

New Light on the Strange "Headless" Murder Mystery at Woonsocket

What is the solution of the strange murder of Mrs. Angela Delmar, whose headless body was found in the Blackstone river at Woonsocket? No mystery of recent years has so completely baffled police investigation.

A theory just worked out, which may have great bearing on the case, will be detailed in tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN.

The great Olympics, classics of centuries, opened at Stockholm today. Americans are pitted against the finest athletes in the world. What they achieve will be told in detail in Sunday's AMERICAN. The AMERICAN will print the only official report written by Mike Murphy, trainer of American athletes.

Boston today witnesses a most unusual wedding. Two people, wedded by proxy some months ago, when one was in Boston and another in Holland, will remarry in this city. No stranger marriage has ever been recorded in New England. The Sunday AMERICAN will explain the details of the unusual ceremony.

Mr. Nick Young and Mr. Moynahan have collaborated on a story and amusing comic drawing which will interest everybody in the South End. The story is about the Globe Theatre's Free Country Store. People living in the vicinity are invited in to appear in the store scene on the stage, and, according to Mr. Moynahan and Mr. Young, the scene is full of funny incidents.

A Boston woman is about to enter upon unusual honors abroad. She is to shine at the Kaiser's court as one of the official circle. Already she is a countess and has had many social distinctions, but her plans for her campaign in Berlin outshine anything she has ever attempted before. The story of what she plans to do abroad will be told in Sunday's AMERICAN.

Every year thousands of little country girls come to Boston to become famous singers. A very few succeed—most of them fail. The story of their struggles is vividly told by one of them in Sunday's AMERICAN. This girl has been more fortunate than some of her companions, and she has just won recognition, but the story of the struggles and disappointments of her less fortunate companions should be read by every girl who has ambitions to come to THE GREAT CITY to learn how to sing.

Frederick Johns, the AMERICAN'S music critic, is touring in Europe, hearing new operas, calling on great singers and composers and the like. His first letter from Paris, telling of a new opera which may be sung later in Boston and with Zina Brozia, who was here last season, in the cast, will be printed in tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN.

Tomorrow is MAGAZINE SUNDAY. The July number of the AMERICAN'S Great Once-a-Month Magazine might be called the Summer Fiction Number.

There is a most interesting story by the late Jacques Futrelle, who perished in the Titanic disaster. The story is of the race track and is one of the most powerfully interesting stories ever written by the Scituate author.

Another story by a Boston man is one more of the "Father's Fool" series by Lewis Allen. "Father's Fool" wins another large amount of money from father after a very spectacular mining stock deal.

"The Day We Celebrate," by O. Henry, adds to the entertaining features, and Elbert Hubbard assures us that "Convicts in Prison Are Lucky."

The cover design is by Penrhyn Stanlaws and is another of those Girl pictures suitable for framing.

The youngsters will be glad to learn that the Katzies have arrived out on the ranch and have met Mr. Alkali Oscar. The meeting was not satisfactory to everybody.

There is a whole page of pictures in the AMERICAN'S newest contest, and there is $5 waiting for every woman whose picture appears on the page.

More Revere bargain coupons than ever before will be printed in the City Life Section.

Fact is, tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN is something of a bargain from cover to cover, and if you don't order your paper today, you may find the supply exhausted.

The Governors of five of the New England States have agreed to edit the Sunday AMERICAN for five successive Sundays during July and August.

The Governors will take their turns as editors in this order:

On Sunday, July 14, Governor Frederick W. Plaisted of Maine.
On Sunday, July 21, Governor Robert P. Bass of New Hampshire.
On Sunday, July 28, Governor Eugene N. Foss of Massachusetts.
On Sunday, August 4, Governor Aram J. Pothier of Rhode Island.
On Sunday, August 11, Governor John A. Mead of Vermont.

In inviting the Governors of New England to supplant the regular editor on the five Sundays named, the AMERICAN suggested that each prepare a leading editorial on some subject of vital interest to the State he represents, and to select as far as practicable the news to be presented on that day.

These five "Governors' Editions" will present to the people of the New England States the most important matters that concern the general welfare.

One Governor regards good roads as a most important subject for discussion, and another public regulation of railroad lines serving New England.

Governor Foss in accepting the AMERICAN'S invitation writes:

> I shall be very glad to furnish the leading editorial for the Sunday AMERICAN of July 28, and will probably take as my subject "Public regulation of the railroad lines serving New England; why past Legislatures have refused to grant it, and how to get it this Fall."

Governor Pothier writes:

> My contribution may not be a message to the citizens of New England, but I will try to bring to their attention matters which I shall consider of interest to them.

Governor Plaisted writes:

> I should be pleased to comply with the request contained in your letter.

Governor Mead writes:

> I assure you it will be a pleasure to accept your invitation, and upon my return to Rutland (Governor Mead wrote from Chicago, I will be pleased to give the matter attention. We will arrange the subject then.
